Historical dedication recognizes lumbering contribution

Millen Township Park was the recipient of a new historical sign celebrating the lumbering years of Mud Lake (now Jewell Lake) and Alcona County.

This new sign, with a map of the railroad lines from 1880-1910 and photographs of lumbering activities, was dedicated at a gathering at the park on September 2. Hosted by Jim Burger, Millen Township supervisor, and Linda Klemens, president of the Alcona Historical Society, the crowd of over 50 people heard about the long log era, where pine trees up to 200 feet tall and two to five feet in diameter were cut, banked and transported by railroad to Black River on Lake Huron, then rafted to lower Great Lakes cities.

Dave Tacia, historian, read from a lumberman's journal, written during those early days of logging, "I finally got a job sorting lumber and it was hard work. While the foreman was very good to me, it was too hard for me and I had to give it up, although it paid $1.35 per day for only 11 hours work with 57 cents a day taken off for board." It further stated, "at Hitchcock & Brady's camp near Mud Lake, a pine tree was cut that scaled 5,658 board feet. Seven logs were cut from it – five 16 foot logs and two 14 foot logs."

This new sign, sponsored in part by a grant from the Community Foundation for Northeastern Michigan, is permanently placed near the pavilion at the Millen Township Park. The Barton City Improvement Association helped with the installation. The public is encouraged to stop by and see the sign during park hours.

Curran Black Bear Festival brings community together

By Mary Weber Staff Writer

Blue skies with just a tinge of fall in the air accompanied the eighth annual Curran Black Bear Festival last Saturday.

The day long event featured multiple displays including a car show, raptor presentation and a parade through Curran to the Mitchell Township Hall.

Parade entrants included horses from both the Iosco County Sheriff's posse and the Oscoda County 4-H groups. Girl Scouts marched and float participation enhanced the parade with entries such as a large nest with a half dozen preschoolers dressed as eaglets from Eagles Nest Preschool tossed candy to an appreciative crowd lining M-65 and Tower Road.

Grand marshals Donald and Ardith Crowell smiled and waved to the crowd as they passed. The Crowells are lifelong residents of Curran and have spent countless hours helping the community in a variety of ways including the Mitchell Township Citizen's Watch for 32 years.

At the township hall, dozens of crafters, artisans and demonstrators sold or showed their skills, while festival goers munched on cotton candy, nacho salads and hot dogs.

Gleaming yellow and red antique and classic cars rivaled the fall color of the trees as well as many other colors of the rainbow. J. Terry Small, chairman of the Black Bear Festival said they had 50 car entries this year.

Mike Lay, a Curran resident who works with Willow Winds Outdoor Survival, showed a grand scale teepee filled with Native American survival items he made such as arrowhead spears and furs that he trapped and skinned. Lay is part Cherokee Indian and adopted Mohawk. He has been working with Jim Miller and Willow Winds teaching outdoor survival skills for about eight years. "Most of the people want to know how the teepee works, it actually acts as a big chimney when there is a fire inside," Lay said.

Other demonstrators on hand were wood working skills by Curran's Jordon Luebben who was crafting a large bear from wood with a chain saw.

Inside the township hall were more crafters and the Association to Rescue Kritters (ARK) who brought a few raptors to educate folks and allow them an up close view of the birds.

ARK Birds of Prey in St. Helen, Mich., permanently keeps injured unreleasable raptors to use for education visiting classrooms and community events. ARK is a nonprofit organization dedicated to the rescue, rehabilitation, and release of injured and orphaned wildlife. ARK volunteers see a wide variety of animals, mostly fawns, raccoons, squirrels and young birds of prey like hawks and owls.

Director, Ruth Fruehauf explained she has been rehabbing animals since 1993 but began with ARK in 2001. "We've been coming to the Black Bear Festival for four or five years to bring our unreleasable animals to show and educate," Fruehauf said as she gently a great horned owl. "The owl's name is Boudica. The owl was hit by a car and sustained a broken wing. The wing bone healed but there was muscle damage and he was declared unreleasable because he would never survive in the wild with his injuries," Fruehauf said.

The question most people ask Fruehauf is how they feed the raptors. Fruehauf's standard answer is "very carefully." She explained once every six weeks or so volunteer members go to a facility that provides rats and mice for medical labs and zoos. "We pack the van with garbage bags full of dead mice and rats and then meet and have mouse bagging parties and freeze the remains," Fruehauf said.

ARK also brought an American kestrel, named Monique who had lost an eye when she hit a car and a barred owl named Bard who Cathy Dettling (left) EMT specialist, leads a class on CPR training, which includes operating Automatic External Defibrillators (AED) for 25 people from local churches that recently purchased AEDs. Mia Welscott and Pastor Tom Welscott of Westminster Presbyterian Church in Harrisville listen to Dettling. Calvary Baptist, Lincoln United Methodist, Lott Baptist, Spruce Presbyterian, Spruce Lutheran, St. Andrew's Episcopal, St. Paul Lutheran and Westminster Presbyterian, with the assistance of Alcona EMS, were able to purchase the AEDs at a discounted rate -- roughly $800 a piece instead of $1,500. According to Maureen Castern, finance and stewardship chairman for Spruce Presbyterian Church, her church decided to purchase an AED because it had two occasions to call 911 during a church function in recent years. The cost of AEDs proved to be a problem, according to Castern, until the churches combined efforts and contacted Heart Smart Technology, the vendor used by Alcona EMS, and received a more economical price. "We contacted 33 churches, all those in Alcona County and a few near Ossineke, to see if they were interested in purchasing an AED," Castern said. "Most churches that I spoke with could not afford even the discounted price... The recent hard economic times have hit our county churches. We need to work together whenever we can to help each other to keep our doors open as long as possible." Courtesy photo.

Outside the hall, kids were getting their faces painted and joining in cake walks while the little tykes were bouncing in a bounce house.

The Curran Black Bear Festival celebrates the native Black Bear, but as it is written in the festival book, it is also a celebration of small town life in America -- Curran has less than 400 full time residents.

Tamrya Ranger (right) takes an oath of office from Alcona County Clerk Patricia Truman. Ranger has been appointed as a local representative on the Department of Human Services (DHS) board by Gov. Rick Snyder. Ranger joins two other Alcona County residents on the DHS board -- Aaron Spalding and Kay Travis, who were appointed by the Alcona County Board of Commissioners. Ranger's three year term begins November 1. The role of a DHS board member is to assist the department in maintaining and improving the delivery of services in balancing the needs of Alcona County citizens to the various resources available through the DHS. Those duties include advocacy and coordination of services for the citizens and the department. "Board members are a liaison for residents to DHS to ensure that the needs of the residents are met by the department," said John Keller, DHS director for Alcona, Alpena and Montmorency counties. "We are excited to have Tammy on the board with her knowledge and expertise of Alcona County." Ranger, who attended the monthly meeting Tuesday said she was very pleased with the appointment and surprised at the amount of assistance provided to residents. According to the financial report, $225,296 was given in public assistance to residents in August 2012. Food assistance was the leading category for assistance to residents. "As the county juvenile officer, this appointment is a good fit as I already have a close working relationship with staff from the department as well as a good understanding of services available," Ranger said. "I'm here to advocate for Alcona citizens and help resolve problems. Together we will work with DHS to find solutions. I can be reached at my office in the courthouse at (989) 724-9470."

Snow is coming, so shake your mailbox

The third annual Shake Your Mail Box Day in Michigan is Saturday, Oct. 20. The specially-designated day is the result of an effort among road commissions throughout Michigan to raise awareness of the importance of a well-maintained mailbox.

Mailboxes are allowed in the road right of way as a convenience for mail delivery even though considered a roadside safety hazard. Each winter season, countless mailboxes sustain damage from winter maintenance operations—mostly from the force of the snow being cleared from roadways.

In many cases, mailbox damage can be avoided if the structure is properly maintained, repaired, and/or replaced prior to the winter maintenance season.

Shake Your Mailbox Day is hoped to be a motivator for owners to give their mailboxes a good shake and to fix or repair the structure before winter. The premise is that if a mailbox cannot withstand a vigorous shaking, it probably won't withstand the force associated with winter road maintenance.

"We hope by having a designated day to inspect and repair mailboxes, residents will get in the habit of annually including the task in their preparations for winter much the same as replacing furnace filters or batteries in smoke detectors," said Alcona County Road Commission Administrative Assistant Marlena MacNeill.

In addition to the inspection and making any necessary repairs, the following are suggestions that may reduce or eliminate the probability and severity of damage:

 Replace custom mailboxes with a standard mailbox for the winter months;

 Remove mailboxes from the post where mail is not received during the winter season;

If your mailbox looks like this, it likely won't withstand a good shaking, let alone being pummeled by snow. Saturday, October 20, 2012, is Shake Your Mailbox Day in Michigan. The Alcona County Road Commission urges property owners to use the day as a reminder to repair mailboxes before winter weather sets in. Courtesy photo.

• Plan driveway snowplowing techniques to ensure that snow will be cleared away from the mailbox area and not piled in the plow line preceding the box;

• Resist the urge to reinforce mailbox structures, opting instead for practical installation methods, such as using screws instead of nails, to ensure the box is as secure as possible;

• A mailbox guard may be the best defense for a mailbox where damage has occurred repeatedly due to contributing factors such as areas where heavy drifting oc-

"Our number one job is to clear snow from the roadway for safe travel in the winter and mailboxes are very vulnerable during winter plowing operations," said Mac-Neill, who answers many of the calls about mailbox damage. "When a lot of snow has fallen, or when the snow is wet and heavy, damage is more likely, but even under normal operations, the force of the snow can easily crack a post or push a mailbox off the post. Using this day to inspect and repair mailboxes may later save residents the inconvenience of making alternate delivery arrangements or replacing the structure when the weather isn't so friendly."

"Mailboxes should be installed so that the post would break off should it be hit by a vehicle. Reinforcement and more rigid installations increase the possibility of injury to passengers in errant vehicles and, there's a possibility the owner of the structure may be held liable for damages," MacNeill said.

The road commission recommends that a mailbox be installed individually on wooden posts using a single four inch by four inch square post or a six-inch diameter, or less, round post. The post should be buried no deeper than two feet in the ground.

Information about the proper guidelines for installing a mailbox to meet United State Postal Service requirements can be obtained from your post office.

For more information about Shake Your Mail Box Day, contact the Alcona County Road Commission at 301 N. Lake Street, P.O. Box 40, Lincoln, Michigan 48742, by phone at (989) 736-8168 or by e-mail at roads@alconacrc.com.

How to compare Medicare prescription drug plans

Dear Savvy Senior,

Is it important to compare Medicare Part D prescription drug plans every year? My pharmacist recommends it, but it's such a hassle sorting through all those different plans. What can you tell me? Confused Beneficiary

Dear Confused,

Because all Medicare Part D prescription drug plans can change their costs and coverage each calendar year, comparing plans every year during the open enrollment period (which is October 15 -December 7) is still the best way to ensure you don't miss out on your best deal for 2013, especially if you take a lot of medications.

Here are a few tips and resources that can help you compare plans with the least amount of hassle.

If you're comfortable using a computer, you can easily compare Medicare's drug plans yourself online. Just go to Medicare's Plan Finder Tool at www.medicare.gov/ find-a-plan, and type in your zip code or your personal information, the drugs you take and their dosages, and select the pharmacies you use and you'll get a cost comparison breakdown for each plan available in your area.

This tool also provides a five-star rating system that evaluates each plan based on past customer service records, and suggests generics or older brand name drugs that can reduce your costs.

It's also important to keep in mind that when you're comparing drug plans don't judge a plan strictly by its monthly premium cost. Lowpremium plans are often associated with higher prescription co-payments and may end up being more expensive. Look at the "estimated annual drug costs" that shows how much you can expect to pay over a year in total out-of-pocket costs including premiums, deductibles and co-pays.

you're considering covers all of the drugs you take with no restrictions. Some plans may require you to get permission or try a number of cheaper drugs before they will cover certain prescrip-

If you need some help with this or if you don't have Internet access to compare the plans yourself, ask your kids, grandkids or a trusted computer-savvy friend to help you, or you can call Medicare at (800) 633-4227 and a customer service representative will do it for you over the phone for free.

Another resource that you can call on for help is your State Health Insurance Assistance Program (SHIP), which provides free one-onone Medicare counseling in person or over the phone. They also conduct seminars during the open enrollment period at various locations throughout each state. To find the contact information

Also, be sure the plan for your local SHIP visit shiptalk.org, or call the eldercare locator at (800) 677-1116.

You also need to know that Medicare's "donut-hole" coverage gap will shrink a little more next year. In 2013, Medicare Part D beneficiaries that hit the coverage gap will receive a 52.5 percent discounts on brand-name drugs, and a 21 percent discount on generic medica-

For 2013, the coverage gap begins when your total drug cost exceeds $2,970 (that includes your share and the insurer's share of the costs) and ends when combined spending is $6,733. After that, your Part D plan usually covers around 95 percent of your remaining drug costs for the year.

Also, be aware that if you're a low-income beneficiary and your annual income is under $16,755 or $22,695 for married couples living together, and your assets are below

Savvy Senior

$13,070 or $26,120 for married couples, you may be eligible for the federal Low Income Subsidy known as "Extra Help" that pays Part D premiums, deductibles and copayments. For more information or to apply, call Social Security at (800) 772-1213 or visit socialsecurity.gov/prescription-

By Jared Steiner

The varsity soccer team did not start off the month of October well -- they were defeated at home 4-1 by the visiting Oscoda Owls.

The game was played under the lights and parent's night occurred at halftime.

The Tigers found themselves down 1-0 at the half. Oscoda came out firing again in the second half scoring on a penalty kick to take a 2-0 lead. Alcona answered back off of a corner kick which was headed in by Carson Jamieson to give the Tigers new life.

Oscoda scored two more goals to put the game out of reach and have their revenge in a disappointing defeat for the Tigers as they had already beaten the Owls on their home field in a 1-0 victory earlier in the year.

Aaron Ritchie had 13 saves in net for Alcona and Jared Steiner added an assist.

The Tigers' second game of the week ended with a win when Alcona picked up another 8-0 mercy victory over visiting Kalkaska. It was the Tigers' fourth mercy win of the year in a strong overall game.

Andy Cammack scored the first goal of the game followed by a goal from Schuyler Bates and another from Ryan Schultz. Jared Steiner and Trenton LaVergne finished the first half each scoring a goal of their own to put the Tigers up 5-0.

In the second half, Jesse Collins found the net along with fellow freshman Isaac Dubuque. Jared Steiner scored his second goal with under a minute to play to finish the match. Aaron Ritchie recorded seven saves in goal for the Tigers.

The Tigers played their final home game Monday. They will travel to Standish-Sterling High School on Thursday, Oct. 11. On Saturday, Oct. 13 Alcona will be in Oscoda for the Huron Shores Conference Tournament.

Volleyball team places third in tournament

By Hope Smith

*Volleyball Writer*The varsity volleybal

The varsity volleyball team traveled to Whittemore-Prescott on Saturday, Oct. 6 for a day-long tournament.

The Tigers played teams from Hale, Mio, Oscoda and Whittemore-Prescott, finishing third overall. Each team played a total of 10 games. All games were played to 25 points, rally score, win by two no cap. Win loss records normally determine the championship and runner up teams.

Alcona defeated Whittemore-Prescott scoring 25-20, 25-23 and Hale 25-14, 25-18. Later in the day, Alcona split a match with Whittemore-Prescott who won the first match, 25-15. Alcona rallied back in the second match, 28-26. Alcona lost to Mio in both matches, 25-16, 25-9 and Oscoda, 25-20, 25-20. The Lady Tigers were led by Nikki Smith with 12 aces and 64 assists; Karina Cole with 24 kills; Carly Mitchell with five blocks; and Sam Zerbst with 22 digs.

On October 4 the Tigers hosted Oscoda, in a conference game, for the fourth annual Volley for a Cure match-up. The night was a pink out as fans and players alike wore pink in efforts to show support for survivors and raise awareness for breast cancer. The Alcona volleyball players really got into the spirit with athletes sporting bright pink hair, tiedved pink socks. T-shirts and pink and black zebra Spandex shorts. Alcona players recognized survivors in the audience by presenting them with pink carnations.

Alcona won the first match 25-20. The second and third matches proved to be more of a challenge as Oscoda continued to gain momentum taking an early lead in both matches ultimately prevailing, 25-22, 25-17. In the fourth match, Alcona took the early lead but Oscoda rallied back point for point to tie the score at 14 points. Oscoda eventually pulled away to win the match 25-22

"The girls were fired up to host our fourth annual Volley for a Cure event against Oscoda. Their heightened energy led to a first set win. We were getting a good jump on the ball and making big plays on the net. They fought hard the next three matches but came up short, " Coach Kristi Arnold said.

Mitchell led Alcona for the night with nine kills, two blocks and eight digs; Smith had eight aces and 26 assists

The junior varsity volley-ball team lost their first two matches to Oscoda 25-22, 25-23 but pulled out a win in the third match with a score of 15-5.

It was Tigers against Tigers earlier in the week when Alcona faced off against Hillman.

Alcona started the match with Katelyn Nelson serving the first four points. Hillman stepped up with their own five point streak followed by Alcona's Ashley Shutes answering back with three more points of her own to put Alcona back on top 7-6.

The battle ensued all night as Hillman tried to pull away from Alcona. However, the Alcona Tigers continued to find the answers needed to keep the ball in play. Plagued with errors, Hillman knocked the ball out of bounds several times before bringing the game to 23-20. Hillman served the last five points in a row to walk away with the first match 25-23.

In the second match, Hillman got off to an early 4-0 lead but Alcona was not willing to go home. Both teams rallied point for point to find themselves tied at 18-18. Alcona then went on a seven point streak to capture the win 25-19. Alcona dominated the third match scoring 18 of the first 26 points to lead Hillman 18-8. Hillman fought back to narrow the lead to 22-19 but that's as close as they got as Alcona pulled away to finish the match 25-

The fourth match proved to be much of the same as both teams continued to rally back and forth with determination. Alcona's Tori Keerl went on a four point scoring streak followed by Mitchell's five point serving streak to seal the 25-21 win.

"We battled for every point and made some excellent defensive plays to keep the ball alive. Offensively, we were able to control some of our attack which definitely helped us capture the win," Coach Arnold said.

Alcona was led by seniors Shutes, Smith, Mitchell and Keerl, each contributing four aces. Mitchell had 10 kills and one block; Karina Cole had one block; Smith had 23 assists; and Zerbst had five digs for the night.

The varsity volleyball team is 4-5 in the regular season and 2-2 in the HSC play. The JV team won all three matches against the Hillman Tigers 26-23, 25-23 and 15-5. The JV team is 3-5 in the regular season.

The Tigers will travel to Oscoda on October 15. Will be at home against Hillman on October 16.

Ninety-year-old looks forward to each day

By Mary Weber Staff Writer

With a lifetime of strong work ethics and religious conviction George McIntyre goes about his daily tasks with a genuine interest in how the world around him is growing and changing.

George is a survivor in every sense of the word and recently celebrated his 90th birthday with friends and relatives at this home in downtown Harrisville.

He has endured his share of heartaches along the way, losing his wife, Betty, after 46 years of marriage. A few years ago he buried his youngest daughter, Mary Beth. George has also had a few health scares of his own along the way, but despite it all, George proudly continues on.

At 90 George does most of his own yard work, grocery shopping and cooking. "He's a master on the grill," his part time house keeper, Linda Durfee said. Durfee stops by to check on George and helps him with house cleaning every few weeks. "His wife, Betty hired me to help with the housekeeping seven or eight years ago and I stayed on to help George after she passed," Durfee said.

George was born and raised in Harrisville not far from where he lives today. His parents were dairy farmers and he worked on the farm with them. "I was probably eight when I learned how to drive a tractor," George said. "We didn't have TV or even a radio when I was growing up. We didn't even have electricity on the farm until I was in the 12th grade, but it was a good life, I enjoyed getting up early and taking care of the cows.

The family had about 24 cows that all had to be hand milked. George never hunted or fished, nor was he a member of 4-H. "We didn't have time for that stuff, we had work to do," he said.

George worked the farm until he was 40, but also worked a number of different jobs, many times having two jobs that he tended daily. "I did what I had to do for my family," George said as he sipped the last of his coffee, "I've had a good life, I'm happy with what I've done."

George drove a school bus in Alcona County for quite a few years and after the kids were delivered safely home, he'd go to work at the bowling alley. He then got a job working part-time for the city and another part-time job working for the post office. Many mornings he'd have to wake up early to plow snow for the city before going to the post office. He worked those two jobs for 14 years before being hired in as postmaster in Glennie. "I was really surprised to get a call asking me to be postmaster for Glennie, it just came out of the blue. I didn't even know Glennie had a post office," he said, snickering just a bit.

Family and friends gathered to celebrate George McIntyre's 90th birthday. A birthday that significantly deserves a candle of equal proportion. "You may think he's scowling. He's not. He wears a rather serious expression most of the time, but in this picture, he is smiling. That's about as big as they get for George," said his son, George. Courtesy photo.

George worked as the postmaster for Glennie for three years before transferring to be postmaster of Harrisville. He worked for the U.S. Postal Service for 23 years before retiring in 1989.

George served on the Alcona Community School Board for 22 years. "I enjoyed being part of the school board very much," George said.

For 66 years he has been a member of the Masons, a worldwide society known for its charitable work. The local Mason group George belongs to provides college scholarships for local teenagers through fund raising events like golf tournaments and Swiss steak dinners.

George has also done his share of volunteering and helping neighbors. "The city is a lot different now than it was. I used to know everybody, but that's all changed. When I worked in the post office we sorted mail by name, so you got to know people. Now it seems like everyone is just a number.

"I still have keys to half the houses in Harrisville. If someone needed something fixed, we just went over and fixed it. I did a lot of woodwork for people," he said.

George also helped out part time for Gillies Funeral Home when needed. "I'd pick up and transport or do whatever else needed to get done. It was interesting work."

When asked what the secret to a long life is, George simply responded that he has no idea. "I only take two pills a day, one for cholesterol and one for my heart." He suffered a heart attack and had open heart surgery, but it was so long ago, he barely remembers it.

"I don't drink and I don't smoke, but I do drink coffee in the morning. I do a lot of cooking on the grill, I don't eat anything fried, it's either baked or grilled," George said. He likes chicken, burgers, steaks and pork. He also likes his sweets, especially pie, but always in moderation.

Another thing which has probably kept George healthy is that he doesn't have a salt shaker in the house. "I only use a little salt in mashed potatoes, nothing else," he said.

Nearly every morning George has coffee with his friends Phil Stheiner, Noel Lemere and a few others, when they are in town. The guys get together to discuss what's going on in the neighborhood and any world news of interest. "He's sharp for a man of 90," his friend Stheiner said. "He knows what's going on and is actively interested. He reads the papers cover to cover every day. He's just a really good guy and no matter where he goes in town, somebody knows him."

George gets a little exercise in when he can; he mows his own grass and up to this year has been able to plow his own snow. He also walks to the Westminster Presbyterian Church every Sunday, which is directly across the street from his house. George said he still drives occasionally, "Just locally, during the George doesn't have a cell phone or the Internet, but he does watch television, mostly sports. He's a big Detroit Tiger baseball fan. "Both he and his wife Betty loved baseball and could give you all the stat's on just about any team," Stheiner said.

"I watch baseball, sports and news, I don't watch reality TV and I don't watch dancing shows either. It seems like there's a hundred stations now and nothing to George's daughter, Wendy, lives in Bellview, Mich. and works for an airline. His son, George, works in radio in Flint, Mich. He has four grandchildren.

"My kids planned the party for me, I didn't even know about it until I read an advertisement for it in the paper. We had 70 or 80 people stop by the house to say happy birthday to me. I even had someone stop by that I used to drive to school when I was a bus driver. A lot of people seem to know me and like me. I don't remember all those kids I drove bus for, but some of them still know me. It's nice to be remembered like that," George said as he gazed at a stack of birthday cards.

I'm plum out

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep Columnist

After many years together, the husband knows what it means when he finds me frowning off into space on a weekend morning.

"Thinking about a column?" he inquired. "Aren't you going to write about the debate?"

"Probably," I told him with a sigh. "But I don't want to."

Art kindly refilled my coffee. "Maybe," he suggested, "You should write about why you don't want to."

And that's just what I'm going to do.

"Why I Don't Want to Write About The Debates" (By Kathryn F. Kniep).

It's not, as you might think, because my guy rather... well... lost. I'd be the first to admit that he wasn't his usual snappy self, last Wednesday night. It's not even that the other guy "won."

It's just that 30 days before the Presidential election, when I'd normally be in high dudgeon over one political thing or another, I am – as a dear friend signed her e-mail this morning – dispirited. I am tired of it all and after months and months of election coverage, discouraged by the way we do political business in this country these days.

for example. Take, Wednesday's debate. Within minutes of its conclusion, the media was reporting who "won" and who "lost" and whether or not the moderator was a weenie, without much comment on the biggest, and possibly most important, thing of all. That being that the 60 million people who had spent 90 minutes or so watching, learned not one thing that would - or should - cause them to choose a candidate. And that this much heralded and longawaited event was largely a case of a great deal of style and very little substance.

Almost before the microphones had cooled, the fact checkers crept out onto the stage to begin munching up the crumbs. A child of the Disney generation, that's how I always envision the fact-checkers we hear so much about in this election. A group of animated mice, all of them wearing horn-rimmed glasses, picking over the remains once the media crows have flown off with all the shiniest bits.

In the interest of research,

Be Prepared

You never know who might show up at your feeder. The other day, out of the blue, one bright-yellow male goldfinch came into my yard. I quickly filled a feeder with sunflower heart chips. He ate for about 10 minutes and was gone. It made my day.

E-mail: birdingbits@cfl.rr.com > 2012 King Features Syndicate. Inc.

Ifact-checked the fact checkers this week, reading the analyses published by the Associated Press, The New York Times and ABC News (chosen at random). AP said, "President Barack Obama and Republican rival Mitt Romney spun one-sided stories in their first presidential debate, not necessarily bogus, but not the whole truth."

The Times described sorting out the half-truths as "trying to wrestle a squirrel— quite a beleaguering task." ABC News said they found "...some facts, some fictions, some not quite facts and some mostly fictions."

Given that, and the fact the principals in the debate spent most of their time arguing over whether what their opponent said was true or not, it was a less than informative evening.

Here's how the debate would go if I ruled the world: Each of the candidates would make an opening statement. Neither of them would then comment on the other's opening statement. They would instead go on to answer (taking equal turns) a series of questions on what they would do regarding the economy, taxes, foreign policy, education and other presidentially-driven issues if elected.

Neither would interrupt the other. Neither would comment on the truth or accuracy of the other's statement. Neither would get "just a few seconds more" to revisit an issue. There would be a time limit and when it was up, we would move on to the next topic.

The only debate allowed by each candidate would be on why his or her plan would work, not why he or she believed the opponent's would not. And for each proposed plan on each proposed subject, two unbiased average citizens, one pro one con, would stand up and truthfully state how they believe each plan would affect them on a personal level.

Well, that would certainly make it longer. And not much of a debate, you may say. True, perhaps. Still, it would give us so much more information than we acquired Wednesday night – and allow us to determine whether or not we believe what was said was the truth – either by checking the facts ourselves, or reading what the fact checkers have to say.

A debate with homework? Well, yes. Based on the premise that before we exercise our right to vote -- a right granted to only 38 percent of the world's population, by the way - we make our decisions on what we have determined to be true and what we believe to be the best ideas.

It's not just the debate, though. It's the constant barrage of advertising, sound bites, tweets and e-mails bearing inaccurate or just plain false information.

Take for example, the myriad of ads recently aired on television, regarding Michigan's upcoming proposals. It's positively mind-boggling to count the number of "coulds, shoulds, and mights" within this advertising. Those for or against each issue are making huge stretches in what might (or might not) occur if the proposals are (or aren't) approved.

Puttin' On The Fritz

Some of these statements defy logic. When that's the case, I truly believe the founding fathers expected the electorate to be smart enough to recognize it, or at least wise enough to look into it. I'm afraid that in 2012, that may be an over-optimistic expectation.

On the local level, we've reached a point where a no vote by the majority - even when more than 1,000 more voters vote no than yes - isn't accepted as a definitive statement. We're told that an issue voted down in August will reappear on the November ballot because "the voters didn't understand the issue." Okay. So if I believe that voters this November didn't understand why the Republican candidate wasn't the best choice, can we have another go at it?

The whole sordid mess really shouldn't be surprising. We've seen this same mentality increasingly applied to legislation and laws over the past decade. Governance has come to be about winning or losing, not about doing what is right or good or the American way and about adding to wealth rather than caring for our fellow citizens in an upright, decent, manner or even about listening to the will of the people.

It's for precisely those reasons that poverty has become a crime in this country. It is why, as John Stewart points out, a business taking advantage of a loophole is considered clever, while an individual taking advantage of a program that will feed his children is "mooching on the system."

That low groaning noise you're hearing is presumably Lyndon Johnson, posthumously mourning the death of his Great Society.

As for me, I'm feeling – as my friend put it – dispirited. Truly dispirited, for the first time in my 40 years of voting. I'll vote – not to would be to surrender entirely. But for me, this time around, it all kind of comes down to a Dan Rather quote, spoken to a colleague on-air one election night: "Maybe you can bring some perspective on this. I'm plum out."

The couple has one daughter, Katrina – "the Princess," two dogs, Lady and Henry, and granddog, Bastian, all of whom are frequent victims of her column.)

NASCAR REPORT

Edwards optimistic despite down year

NASCAR THIS WEEK By Monte Dutton

What a difference a year

In 2011, Carl Edwards compiled the best average finish in Chase history, 4.9. Yet still it wasn't enough to win the Sprint Cup championship. Tony Stewart, who won five of the 10 Chase races, won by a tie-breaker.

In the AAA 400, Edwards finished fifth, which would have been fine if it didn't match his best finish all year. This year Edwards didn't even make the Chase, and his Cup career has a certain pattern to it. Three times the Columbia, Mo., native and resident has had big years, and each time he has struggled the following season.

In 2005, Edwards finished third. The following year he was 12th. In 2008, Edwards finished second. The following year he was 11th. In 2011, I try to look forward ..." he finished second. This year he currently ranks 14th.

Edwards, 33, can't come up with a reason why.

"I could sit here, and we could go through every race and how they went," he said recently. "I don't know if you want to do that or not, but a lot of the races have been bad luck, where we got caught up in wrecks or we had trouble at Indy, where I thought we had a pretty decent car.

"We haven't run as well as we need to run, but that's the only way I know how to be is an optimist. That's the only reason I'm sitting here in this suit driving for Jack Roush, because you always have to go out and give it your best. You've got to do everything you can, and at the end of the day, if you don't get the result you want, that's very frustrating. But I don't look back,

Edwards wasn't particularly placated by the AAA 400 performance, but he had finished 22nd, 36th, 17th, 19th and 19th in the previous five

"It was a decent finish," he said. "We didn't deserve to finish that far forward, but we had some lucky breaks and my guys did a good job on pit road.

'We'll go back and work on it and figure out what we were missing there, because it seemed like all of us (meaning Edwards and teammates Greg Biffle and Matt Kenseth) struggled a little bit."

Carl Edwards has the best average Chase finish of all time but he's never won a championship, and won't this season as he failed to qualify. Still, Edwards says, he remains an optimist. (Getty Images for NASCAR photo)

Organization Notes

DAR, River Aux Sables Chapter

River Aux Sables Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution was treated to a presentation by Julie and John Dyle of Pelston, Mich. on Civil War style quilts and costumes. Each quilt and the costumes they wore were created by exact period patterns and sewn by hand as our foremothers and fathers had sewn them.

Our foremothers only had an inch long needle, what thread they could come by and a pair of hardly sharp scissors. Prior to the Revolution making your own material for any reason was treason just to own, let alone display outright on a bed. Fabric had to be purchased from Britain prior to the war, and at a cost of upwards of what today would amount to close to $4,000 a yard. Every scrap was dear and every quilt of that period displays ingenuity in pattern and piecing to achieve a finished product.

During the Civil War sewing uniforms for the Union Army was a contract job given to wounded veterans or the women from the homes of fallen and wounded soldiers from the previous wars in an attempt to give them some income to support their families. All of the uniforms were by official pattern and the thick wool material, which both had to be purchased from the government, was hand-sewn by the mothers and sisters and veterans back home for the troops.

All the quilts presented by the Dyles are hand quilted in the exact description and color combinations of those seen in museums and books about those era quilts. They have shown their quilts in several state museums and present shows at various venues teaching about the periods and the patterns that each quilt represents. Particularly interesting were the part the quilt patterns had in the Underground Railroad escape to freedom, which colors came into use at what particular time in history and why -- with what plants, animals or insects were processed to create that particular color.

The next meeting will be held in October at the Good Shephard Christian Church in Gladwin, Mich. Any woman over 18 who wishes to find out more about becoming a member of the DAR, may contact the website: w w w . r i v e r auxsables.michdar.-net.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Color Flashlight for Your Smart Phone

Returning from Philadelphia "in the dark" last week, I inadvertently managed to scoot through an E-ZPass lane. All types of expletives danced through my brain as I envisioned my tariff at the exiting tollbooth. Having gotten a receipt going into Philly, I asked my wife, Sue, to find it so I could try to talk my way out of this dilemma, but there was no flashlight. I said, "Use my smart phone flashlight," and after some bumbling and three near sideswipes, we got the light working. She found the receipt and at the toll booth, I thankfully paid for only the road miles traveled. The man at the exit did swipe my driver's license and request DNA samples from both of us, all while an immensely long line of angry drivers queued up behind us. Why not simply use the car's cabin lights, you're thinking? I'm an astronomer and they are disconnected. That got me to thinking about flashlight applications for my Android phone, and I found a really sophisticated and free one called Color Flashlight. If you leave CF on or off when exiting the app, it returns in the same manner when you reboot it. In addition, it allows the user to illuminate his or her smart phone LCD panel in any color independent of the flashlight, providing the user with diffuse lighting from nearly off (extremely dim) to as bright as the panel on the phone will permit. The use and flexibility of the flashlight is obvious, but the colors are very helpful for astronomy because the user can take advantage of red light and small amounts of green lighting, for seeing gear in the dark without losing any dark adaptation. CF also has a host of other helpful effects which are fun and safety oriented. There is a more sophisticated version, also for free, called Color Flashlight HD, but I'd rather "Keep it simple stupid." That's the writer calling himself stupid and not trying to incite my readers to riot. www.astronomy.org

WEICHEL'S WHOPPERS

In response to the advertisement placed in last week's paper by Alcona County Prosecutor Tom Weichel, we are providing the following point by point rebuttals. First: Mr. Weichel is correct the HUNT tax pays for two deputies. However, one works full time for HUNT. The other splits his duties between HUNT and Alcona County. These deputies are NOT part of the Sheriff Department budget that already employs one part-time and eleven full-time officers. Defeating HUNT (again) does not reduce the Sheriff's Department budget.

Second: It is false that the millage allows us to participate in HUNT. According to HUNT annual reports, Alcona County never contributed more than $19,500 from 1990 (the first year of HUNT) through 2002. Since the first millage passed in 2002 for the 2003 budget year, Alcona County has contributed an ever growing amount of tax dollars (2003 - $51,500 to 2011 - $97,317). But despite the quintupling of Alcona taxpayer contributions, the number of drug investigations has remained static. The truth, contrary to Mr. Weichel's claim, is that HUNT receives hundreds of thousands of federal and state tax dollars and functions under an interlocal operating agreement to provide services to Alcona County.

Third: Mr. Weichel claims that numbers were manipulated to put HUNT in a negative light, but fails to provide a single example. This is because numbers are numbers, and all the numbers came from HUNT annual reports. We simply provided the light that Fourth: The statement of Mr. Weichel that we don't have drugs on the street corners of Alcona County because of HUNT is a classic tautology. A tautology is a series of self-reinforcing statements that cannot be disproved because they depend on the assumption that they are already correct. However, Weichel's tautology implodes with his statement that the reason drug dealers avoid Alcona County is because of HUNT. According to Weichel, the drug dealers are in Alpena County. But, HUNT also operates in Alpena County. Either HUNT isn't doing its job in Alpena or Mr. Weichel's rhetoric is empty.

Fifth: Mr. Weichel's final assertion about HUNT being responsible for finding a murder suspect near Hubbard Lake back in 2010 is both wrong and an insult to the public and to the many officers from the various units involved with the case. According to the Michigan State Police, at the request of the Alcona County Sheriff's Department, detectives from the Alpena, Gaylord and Houghton Lake posts took over as lead investigators. The suspect, who committed suicide, was found by members of the Seventh District Fugitive Team and HUNT. Even HUNT's own 2010 annual report admits that HUNT only provided assistance. Shame on you Mr. Weichel for ignoring the role of the many officers from multiple units who risked their

Finally, on the front page of the same paper in which Mr. Weichel placed his advertisement for HUNT was a story about two drug busts. One was some pot plants found growing outdoors. That was HUNT. The other was about heroin discovered in a Black River residence. That was our local sheriff's department. Clearly, despite Mr. Weichel's claims, our local sheriff's department can and does make drug arrests. Alcona County would be better off providing additional funds and more training for our deputies instead of funding a private police force for Mr. Weichel.
