Meth lab investigation ongoing in Hubbard Lake

Two residences near downtown Hubbard Lake were searched and items were confiscated by officers of the Huron Undercover Narcotics Team (HUNT) on June 23 in an investigation of methamphetamine production.

According to HUNT Commander Detective Lt. Frank Keck, detectives from HUNT conducted search warrants at two Hubbard Lake residences after deputies from the Alpena County Sheriff's Department received information regarding a possible methamphetamine lab.

Deputies from the Alpena County Sheriff's Department were investigating an unrelated complaint at one of the Hubbard Lake residences when they received information regarding methamphetamine being manufactured at that residence, Keck said.

Deputies contacted HUNT detectives, who responded to the scene and executed a search warrant at that residence as well as a second nearby residence which was already under investigation by HUNT detectives for manufacturing methamphetamine.

According to Keck, during the execution of both search warrants, detectives allegedly found multiple precursors, components and containers all used in the manufacturing of methamphetamine at each residence. Detectives also allegedly located the remnants of several "one pot" cooks at one of the residences.

During the execution of the search warrant at the second residence, Gary A. Brower, 33, of Hubbard Lake, was arrested and charged with resisting and obstructing officers. Keck said during the search of the second residence Brower was allegedly caught trying to break into the back of the residence and remove evidence.

HUNT was assisted at both scenes by deputies from the Alpena County Sheriff's Department, the Straights Area Narcotics Team (SANE) and Michigan State Police, Alpena post.

"Once again we are seeing methamphetamine being manufactured within our community. This was another great example of the officers that are working the road (who) recognized one or two of the components used in the manufacturing of methamphetamine, contacting us (HUNT) and the result being multiple meth labs discovered and shut down," Keck said.

Brower was arraigned in Alpena County and was released on a $7,500 10 percent surety bond.

Keck said the investigation is ongoing and multiple suspects were developed as a result of this investigation. He expects several arrests to be made in the near future.

Manufacturing methamphetamine is a felony punishable by up to 20 years in prison and conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamine is a felony punishable by up to seven years in prison.

Triathlon returns to Hubbard Lake

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

Fitness enthusiasts will once again rally in northeast Michigan for the Hubbard Lake Triathlon, an event which was once an annual quest and has been missed by athletes for nearly a decade.

Danielle Belanger, group fitness instructor with Central Michigan University was presented the idea of re-establishing the event by family members and friends who are a part of the Hubbard Lake North End Park renovations.

Belanger got on board with David Cole, a personal trainer from Detroit, Mich. and Hubbard Lake resident Joy Bullis, a cross country coach at Alpena schools, as co-directors for the event. They have helped Belanger in pulling together an Olympic style event in just a few months time.

Belanger explained that planning a triathlon normally takes over a year to coordinate the many details and entities involved. "It's a lot of work, but I'm very glad we did it and proud of how it's going," Belanger said. She admitted that she had never thought about going into event planning before, but as her interest in the Hubbard

Lake Triathlon grows, so does her interest in planning additional fitness events and going into the field as a professional fitness event planner.

Three events will be held on Saturday, Aug. 3:

- The Olympic distance triathlon event includes a 1.5K (.93 mile) swim along the Hubbard Lake shore, a 40K (24.8 mile) bike course which circles around the lake and ends with a 10K (6.2 mile) run.

- The 40K cycling road race event will take place around Hubbard Lake and includes a 0.7 mile lap up Mt. Mariah.
- The 10K run will be on the back roads of the North

Youth dies in boating incident

By Cheryl Peterson

An 11-year-old girl was killed Saturday afternoon on Hubbard Lake when a motor boat pulling a water tube collided with a jet ski.

According to the Alpena County Sheriff's Department, deputies responded to the boating accident around 2 p.m. on June 29 in the East Bay of Hubbard Lake. To date the investigation has found that a motor boat, driven by Mark Prohaska, 45, of Williamsburg, Mich., was pulling the water tube with three youth ages eight, 11 and 14.

"The boat pulling the raft made a sharp right turn and, as a result, the raft moved to the left and struck the jet ski," said Alpena County Sheriff Deputy Scott McKenzie.

All three youth were taken to Alpena Regional Medical Center, where the 11-year-old from Williamsburg, Mich. was pronounced dead. The other two youth received minor injuries, according to the sheriff's department. Occupants in the boat and the driver of the jet ski, William Merkle, 54, of Malcolm, Mich. were uninjured.

The incident is under investigation by the sheriff's department. However, it has been determined that alcohol was not involved.

Hubbard Lake Medical First Responders and Alpena EMS responded and assisted at the scene.

Nelson the Animal Guy visits the Harrisville branch of the Alpena County Library. He told stories about wildlife living throughout the world and brought many live animals for children and adults to see and touch including an alligator, anteater, three banded armadillo, a helammonster and this African springhaas. The springhaas is most closely related to squirrels, beavers and other rodents but is in a classification of its own. The springhaas is built for jumping, with long hind legs, similar to a very small kangaroo, and has a strong, bushy tail. It always leaves its underground burrow by leaping in the air, probably to avoid any predators that might be waiting for it. When it's frightened, the animal flees by hopping, covering six to nine feet with every leap. It often digs several burrows, each of which has a series of tunnels. They spend their days sleeping underground, emerging at night to forage on bulbs and fleshy roots, plant stems and grains. They also occasionally eat insects. For another photo, see page 5A. ## Police Report

Drug Arrests

Two downstate men were arrested in Greenbush Sunday night for possession and use of crack cocaine.

According to the Alcona County Sheriff's Department, a routine traffic stop on US-23 near F-30 around 11 p.m. on June 30 found the passenger of the vehicle, Daniel Lutz of Bay City, Mich., to be wanted for two outstanding felony warrants from another county. As Lutz exited the vehicle to be arrested, a glass crack pipe and two rocks of crack cocaine were allegedly found in his possession.

After questioning both Lutz and the driver, Robert Pauwels Jr., deputies learned they were allegedly driving around smoking crack.

Lutz was arrested and charged with possession of crack cocaine and marijuana and the two outstanding felony warrants. He was arraigned in 81st District court, placed on a $5,000 personal recognizance bond and turned over to another jurisdiction for the outstanding warrants.

Pauwels was arrested and charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence of drugs. He was placed on an interim bond of $400 cash.

Two Car Accident

No serious injuries resulted from a two car accident on Hubbard Lake Road in front of Smokey's Bar Monday. According to the Alcona County Sheriff's Department, deputies responded to the scene at around 5 p.m. on July 1. First responders were already on the scene treating drivers of the two vehicles.

According to the findings from the investigation, a white Buick, driven by Diane Hudock of Barton City, was traveling north on Hubbard Lake Road when a tan Chevrolet Impala, driven by Chelsea Duncan of Alpena, was southbound. Duncan attempted to make a left turn from the southbound lane into the parking lot of the bar, as she crossed the centerline, she collided head-on with Hudock's Buick.

According to the Alcona Sheriff's Department, both drivers were transported to Alpena Regional Medical Center by Alcona EMS. Hudock was admitted for noncritical injuries. Duncan was treated and released. Duncan was found to be at fault and was issued a citation for failure to yield right-of-way.

Alcona Township Medical First Responders and members of the Alcona Township Fire Department assisted at the scene.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

Recently, I was enjoying the view at our Harrisville Harbor. Glancing at the flag display, I noticed something disturbing. Our U.S. flag was flown below some type of marina flag.

Proper etiquette requires the U.S. flag to always be displayed above all other state or other flags representing local organizations.

Perhaps a city council representative can correct the situation.

Carl Buchner
Harrisville

To the Editor,

I hear all this talk about fracking and all I see is an opportunity for other businesses to be called upon for repairs.

I remember when the St. Lawrence Seaway opened and the ships of the world came into the Great Lakes bringing with it the sea lamprey, zebra mussels and other parasites. Game fish were killed off and alwives littered the beaches. How much of our tax dollars were used to fight this problem and we are still fighting it.

The oil spill that happened down in the southwest part of the state. How much did that cost? The BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico and so on.

Keep this fracking out of here and drill in an active volcano. If nothing is broke, don't fix it.

Every time they say it will save us money, it always costs us more.

David Burnham

Wildlife Sanctuary Artists

Debbie Kupinsky and Craig Clifford, Alpena Wildlife Sanctuary's 2013 artists in residence, will speak July 10, 7 p.m., at the Alpena County George N. Fletcher Public Library. The event is free and open to the public. Kupinsky and Clifford, both ceramicists, are in Alpena, drawing, photographing and taking clay impressions in the Wildlife Sanctuary. These studies will become the basis for a series of work exploring the interactions between the natural and cultural elements of the area. A husband and wife team, Clifford and Kupinsky work individually and in collaboration, and have shown extensively in the United States and in Asia. Both teach art at the University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh, where Clifford is a professor and Kupinsky is an adjunct lecturer.

This is the third year of the residency program which began in 2011. The goal of the residency is to develop a museum-quality collection of freshwater-themed art that will be held by the Alpena Wildlife Sanctuary. The works by Catherine Jennings and Mollie Oblinger may be seen at the Alpena County George N. Fletcher Public Library, 211 N. First Ave., Alpena, where they are on temporary display.

End area of Hubbard Lake. "A cool thing we are doing this year that is different from what they used to do in the past is to use a Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) chipped timing system. Each racer will be tagged and the system will track them through the entire race. It gives very accurate timing so when they run over a (RFID) mat it will record their times. We're doing that with a company called Epic Race Timing in Grand Rapids," Belanger said.

Belanger is excited and proud of the sponsors for the event and explained the B Positive Project, a lifestyle apparel company, had just recently offered to be a sponsor. The B Positive Project is a nationally known company located in Boston, Mass., which promotes inspiration, motivation, positivity and healthy lifestyles through its clothing line. As a sponsor for the Hubbard Lake event the company has agreed to supply giveaways such as clothing and accessories as well as making the race T-shirts.

Also sponsoring the event is Flex Fab of Grand Rapids, Mich., Hubbard Lake Lions Club, Road I.D., Nieman's Family Market, Johnny Logo

Marketing Solutions, Alpena Insurance Agency Inc. and The Home Depot.

Cost to enter the triathlon (swim, bike, run) is $100 and registration is due by July 27. Cost for the cycling road race is $45 and $40 for the 10K run. Registrations for the cycling road race and 10K run will be accepted up to race day. Runners age 16 and up may register for the 10K run.

Event earnings from the triathlon will benefit the Hubbard Lake North End Park renovation project, the Big Brothers/Big Sisters organization and the American Diabetes Association.

All registrants will receive a race T-shirt and the first, second and third overall finishers (male and female) will receive awards as well as the first and second in each age group.

"We have had registration interest from people who live locally and about an equal amount of interest from people who live down in the Detroit and Jackson area. There hasn't been a 10K race in this particular area that I can think of; there have been 5K races. This will be something for people to really challenge themselves to a longer distance.

The Hubbard Lake Triathlon used to be a big event in the area and we are so excited that we have the opportunity to benefit the community and provide a fitness event like no other in Northeast Michigan," Belanger said.

For additional information about the Hubbard Lake Triathlon event visit the website at Hubbardlaketriathlon.com or call Danielle Belanger at (989) 335-3488.

Protecting Michigan box turtles, with help from man's best friend

Humans have used dogs as helpers in innumerable pursuits for centuries, and that relationship seems to expand daily. John Rucker, a lifelong bird hunting enthusiast, has always kept dogs to help him pursue upland game, but he's also trained his Boykin spaniels to perform an unusual task.

Rucker's dogs have been trained to find and retrieve turtles.

The 65-year-old Tennessee resident was in Michigan recently to help members of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources' Parks and Recreation Division find Eastern box turtles at Fort Custer State Recreation Area, near Battle Creek, Mich. The box turtles, a species of concern in Michigan, inhabit the woodlands and adjacent fields of Fort Custer. Parks and Recreation staffers are attempting to understand the turtles' seasonal habitat usage to make sure ecological restoration efforts - prescribed burns, mowing and the use of herbicides - do not negatively impact the reptiles.

Alicia Selden, a DNR stewardship analyst, has been working on the turtle project for two years now. She said Rucker's help has been invaluable. "He finds as many turtles in a few days as it takes us a month to find," Selden said.

Eastern box turtles, like this specimen at Fort Custer State Recreation Area, are a species of concern in Michigan. Photos courtesy of Michigan DNR.

Employing the services of an army of volunteers, many of them Michigan State University (MSU) fish and wildlife students, Selden and her helpers survey the agricultural field and prairies adjoining the woods on Fort Custer, finding turtles as they nest in the spring. The critters are typically homebodies, Selden said, but will travel a fair distance - maybe a half mile - from their woodland homes to find appropriate nesting habitat or a place to burrow and overwinter. What they've learned so far has already resulted in changes to their land-management practices, she said.

"We've pretty much put a hold on spring burns until we have a better understanding of the impact on box turtles," Selden said. "We're shifting over to burns in the summer and fall."

Rucker, who travels the country with his dogs to work on turtle conservation projects, said he "just sort of fell" into turtle-hunting more than a decade ago. He was walking with his dogs one day, found a turtle, and showed it to one of his dogs. A short time later, the dog came up to him with a turtle in its mouth. He's been training his dogs to do the same since.

This spring, with Rucker's assistance, the crew found close to 30 box turtles, often in the grass near the woods - where Michigan's only terrestrial turtles spend most of their time - and the sandy agricultural and prairie grass fields. It was a pleasant surprise.

"Last year we found 13," Selden said. "It really scared us. We had more than 600 hours of volunteer time on the ground for that. It scared us."

Tracy Swem, a graduate student at MSU who will spend the summer monitoring the turtles, said making

SENIOR LIFESTYLES

Debt counseling programs can help seniors with financial problems

Dear Savvy Senior,
 What resources can you recommend to help seniors with financial problems? I hate to admit it, but I've fallen behind on my house payments and have accumulated quite a bit of credit card debt over the past few years. Where can we get help?
 In Debt At 70

Dear In Debt,
 There are actually a number of free and low-cost resources available today that can help seniors who are struggling with credit card and/or mortgage debt. To help you get a handle on your credit card debt, a good place to start is at a credit-counseling agency. These are nonprofit agencies that offer free financial education and advice on how to handle financial problems. And if your debt is significant, they can set you up in a debt-management plan (DMP) that allows a counselor to negotiate with your creditors to lower your interest rates and eliminate any late fees and other penalties. The agency will then act as a consolidator, grouping your debts together into one payment that you would make, and distributes those funds to your creditors. Most agencies charge a onetime $30 setup fee and a monthly maintenance fee of around $20 for a DMP.

To locate a credible agency in your area, use the National Foundation for Credit Counseling website at debtadvice.org or call (800) 388-2227.

Do not use a for-profit debt settlement company that claims to settle all your debt, or cut it in half for a fee without counseling. Most of these companies use deceptive practices and will only leave you more in debt than you already are.

If you have fallen behind on your mortgage payments, or if you have already received a letter or phone call about missed payments, you should contact your lender immediately to explain your situation and see if you can work out a payment plan. Be prepared to provide your financial information, such as monthly income and expenses.

You can also get help from a housing foreclosure avoidance counselor. These are HUD-approved, trained counselors that will work with you, examining your financial situation, and offer guidance on how best to avoid default or foreclosure. They can also represent you in negotiations with your lender if you need them to.

To find a government-approved housing counseling agency in your area, use the National Foundation for Credit Counseling website or phone number previously listed. Or for a larger selection of housing counseling options, see the Department of Housing and Urban Development website at hud.gov - click on "Resources" at the top of the page, then on "Foreclosure Avoidance Counseling," or call (800) 569-4287.

Another helpful resource you should know about, and one your counselor can help you explore, is the Making Home Affordable program. Created by the Obama Administration in 2009, this program offers struggling homeowners the opportunity to modify or refinance their mortgage to make their monthly payments more affordable.

It also includes the Home Affordable Foreclosure Alternatives Program for those who are interested in a short sale or deed in lieu of foreclosure. To learn more about these programs and their eligibility requirements see making-homeaffordable.gov or call the Homeownership Preservation Foundation's HOPE Hotline at (888) 995-4673.

You also need to make sure you're not missing out on any financial assistance programs. The National Council on Aging's website (benefits-checkup.org) contains a database of more than 2,000 federal, state and local programs that can help seniors with prescription drug costs, health care, food, utilities, and other basic needs. The site will help you locate programs that you may be eligible for and will show you how to apply.

Turtles

sure the park staff does not impact the turtle population with its land-use practices is important to protect the viability of the population as the Fort Custer crew works to restore the prairie habitat that once dominated the area.

"The reason this matters is they can enter into a slow extinction cycle if they lose just a tiny bit of the breeding population - about two percent," she said. "They aren't sexually mature until they're about 10 years old, and you lose about 98 percent of the hatchlings."

It takes several years for the turtles to form their hard protective shells. Until then, they are vulnerable to predation, particularly to raccoons, which also heavily predate nests by digging them up and eating the eggs.

Box turtles are unique among Michigan turtles. Though they are terrestrial, they are true turtles, not tortoises - they have claws on their feet - and they have a unique evolutionary trait, a hinged underside of the carapace, which allows them to fully retract and protect their head, tail and legs.

Some of the turtles the crew has found this year show damage on their shells from previous burns. Some biologists argue that these turtles have evolved with natural fires and can live with them, though others contend that natural fires do not occur as often as prescribed burns and repeated exposure to the fires over time could damage the population.

Some of the long-lived box turtles, which have been captured, have been fitted with radio transmitters - epoxied to their shells - so they can be located year-round. The knowledge gained about their habitat usage will help land managers better refine their management techniques. In addition, the turtles are marked with a series of notches filed into the outer edge of their shells, so researchers who find a turtle can compare locations to where it was last seen.

The shell-notching is a standard practice among turtle researchers. The crew at the recreation area found two turtles this year that had been marked by a Purdue

MSU graduate student Tracy Swem places an enclosure over the site where a female box turtle had laid her eggs the night before.

University researcher in 2006 on the nearby military training grounds.

The parks and recreation crew made several important discoveries this year. They caught a three-year-old - turtles can be aged by counting the rings on the plates on their shells, like growth rings on a tree - the first juvenile found in the two years of the project. Similarly, when a park staffer picked up a young turtle (seven years old) crossing the road the other day and brought it to Swem, she deemed it "an important find" because "we hadn't found any between four and 10 years old."

Parks and Recreation Division staffers and volunteers will continue to monitor the box turtles into the future. Ideally, the changes in land-management practices brought about by this research will ensure that they'll be able find many more box turtles in the years ahead, while restoring southern Michigan's prairie habitat.

Eastern box turtles, like this one, inhabit woodlands in southern Michigan.

Instructors and students bridge generational gap through art program

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

The plan was simple, combine a community of retired older folks with a large school filled with youth and enthusiasm to create a multi-generational and exciting learning environment.

When Terry Lipscomb moved to Alcona County she realized there was a gap in the generational design of the community. "I saw the community was comprised mostly with retirees and we had a large school very close by. I wanted something that would bridge the generation gap between the two age groups," Lipscomb said.

Art seemed to be an interest to both generations, so several years ago Lipscomb teamed with retired volunteer instructors, many who belonged to the East Shore Art Guild, to bring extra art programs to the students. It also helped to fill gaps in student academics when school budgets could not be stretched enough to hire art teachers for younger students.

The art workshops are coordinated through the East Shore Art Guild; they are free to students and offer a variety of mediums and themes in order for youth to explore their creativity.

The first program Lipscomb oversaw was called the Red, White and Blue Project. Over 400 pieces of art were completed with the emphasis on commemorating military personnel and their family. Lipscomb said the Red, White and Blue Project was very profound for both students and instructors, even the Veterans of Foreign Wars became involved in the project by awarding each student with an achievement certificate.

Lipscomb's newest student project is called the Imagine, Create and Excel (I.C.E.) Challenge. It encourages students to dream big, making the ordinary - extraordinary.

Classes are geared toward eight years and up, but if room is available, Lipscomb and the host of volunteers, including artist Bernie Blazak, have no problem with instructing younger students and also welcome adult students.

"We try to keep the program simple so it's not over the student's head, but we don't talk down to them either. We generally look at what most of the students are learning at school and we try to implement some aspects of their studies into the been without challenges, Lipscomb explained. Up until this year the art program operated on a shoestring budget and coming up with necessary art supplies was through volunteer donations and a lot of imagination. "We'd look for treasures in our own homes and surroundings to come up with supplies. We had to troubleshoot and teach the kids to use articles they find. If you don't have paint brushes, use cotton balls or Q-tips, if you have no paint, use pen and pencils instead and if you have no paper, the inside of a paper bag or an empty box of cereal can be your canvas," she said.

This year the program received a Youth Advisory Grant of $1,423 through the Community Foundation for Northeast Michigan. The grant allowed the purchase of much needed paint, brushes and other art supplies. The students have been busy learning how to use the supplies and how to care for them.

Classes are held one day a week for 10 weeks at the beginning of February after school and in the summer from mid-June to the end of July in the mornings. Until recently, classes had been held in the school, but are now being held at the EMS building on M-72 in Lincoln.

Lipscomb explained continuing to hold classes at the school would require volunteer instructors to pay for background checks annually, costing seniors on a fixed income to make some tough choices with their finances. "We had a hard time finding funds for art supplies let alone providing yearly background checks for all the volunteers. The security of the children we teach is of the utmost importance to us and we take a lot of pride in offering them a safe environment to pursue their interest in art, but we also had to take into consideration the cost to the volunteers. Meeting at the EMS building seemed to make sense and be a good compromise," Lipscomb said.

Last year more than 120 students were engaged with the program, resulting in a display of the art projects being held at the Besser Museum in Alpena. This year the number of students has decreased some, but the passion for the program still remains strong.

Students have exhibited their art in a number of ways including at the Dragonfly Art Gallery in Harrisville and the Huron Community Bank. Art completed by the February class is being displayed at the Harrisville branch of the Alcona County Library until July 17. Summer assignments will be on display at the Impromptu Art Exhibit held in the tent at the Harrisville Harbor on July 17 from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Art will again be displayed at the Dragonfly Art Gallery August 4-11 and at the Alcona County Fair August 20 - 24.

The program is open to anyone who wants to help by volunteering time, making a donation or who is interested in learning about art.

"It is a very rewarding experience. The volunteers build a lot of confidence in the young students, always encouraging them and reminding them there are no mistakes in art. The incredible smiles the children wear when they complete a piece and look at it and say 'I did it all by myself' is very heart warming. It's why we keep working with them and why we want this to continue for years and years," Lipscomb said.

Solstice song

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep
Columnist

It comes to me every year about this time. Usually late on a Sunday evening, as I'm slowly, grudgingly making the transition from the weekend list of things to do to the back-to-the-week list of things to do.

It's that longing to be - for just a few days, anyway - a child of summer again.

Most of the time, I like being an alleged grown-up. Even in the midst of the amazing vanishing weekend, I genuinely like my duties and responsibilities and my life in general. I like the sense of accomplishing things -- crossing things off my to-do list with firm, dark pencil strokes.

Still, there are times, most especially when the world is made up of hot days and warm nights and crescent moons, when I feel a familiar tug in my heart. There are times - almost always about the time of the summer solstice - when I lie awake for a few stolen moments, and instead of reviewing what needs to be done next, I remember.

I remember days when I woke up not because my alarm clock was set, but because the sun had reached an angle where it shone onto my face. My room was up under the eaves on the second floor, where I could watch the dance of leaves at the very tops of the trees through my window. That was the first thing I did each day.

Then I would find my feet, and my dog, Beau, who slept on the foot on my bed, and some clothes and something that would serve as breakfast. I'd make a stab at brushing my hair and wander downstairs to the grocery store to let my folks know I was up and around. I'd get my yellow Schwinn from its stall in the carport, pop up the kickstand, and without benefit of a plan, go see what the world had to offer.

Around the three blocks or so that made up that world, kids were doing the same thing in various order. We'd meet up somewhere in the middle of our universe, and when we did, we didn't talk about the headlines or the stock market or even the local gossip.

Our greeting was the same, every day. "Whatcha' wanna' do?" we asked. "Whatcha' wanna' do today?"

There were whole days to explore the length of the creek that runs through the state park, sometimes from the beach up, sometimes from the foot trails down. Hours spent sitting on the old wooden bridge, absorbing the smell of cedar and water, tracing a finger over the carved initials and declarations of eternal love. There were periodic marathons of swinging; pumping out knees up, then back below the worn wooden seats, pulling hard with our arms. Coming as near to flying as we ever might.

There were afternoons - a half an hour after lunch, by parental decree -- spent floating languorously in Lake Huron or jumping from a big old inner tube. There were hikes from one end of the beach to the other, our pockets wet and sandy with the lake treasure we collected, forgotten by nightfall. There were long periods of summer-stunned silence, broken by the shrill, thwacking whistle of someone blowing across a thick blade of grass held taut between two thumbs.

Summer nights we stayed out late - until the street lights came on - catching fireflies in jars or inventing games of tag or hide and seek with elaborate, ever evolving, unwritten rules. Called back to our own porches, there were wishing stars to watch for and constellations to find, cricket chirps to count and calculate, marshmallows and sparklers and time to burn them both before our bath and bedtimes.

There was a sense of awareness in those days - of knowing what the earth and sky and water felt like and smelled like and tasted like to the 'nth degree. A time spent totally in the now, absolutely inside the here. Long slow days that shaped the rocks on the beach and surely shaped who we became, as well. Perhaps unknowingly, we were preserving that absolute sense of everything because somewhere, deep inside, we knew we would never, ever have a time that totally free and cognizant again.

Perhaps something greater than us knew life would eventually leave us a little too tired to swing ourselves into the sky or run through the night with a sparkler after the street lights came on. Perhaps something wiser than we knew that someday, on the cusp of Sunday evening, and Monday morning, we would need more than pebbles in our pockets.

And so it left a little bit of summerchild in each of us. So that as we lay awake a few moments longer, in the summertime night, our souls would remember the words to her song. Goodnight moon, goodnight star, goodnight fireflies in a jar...

Organization Notes

Alcona County Republicans

Bill Sanders has retired as the chairman of the Alcona County Republican Party. The group appreciates all of his years of dedicated service.

On June 20, a special meeting was held at the library in Harrisville. It was attended by Jesse Osmer the 1st District chairman of the Republican Party. At that meeting Lawrence Brozowski was accepted as the new chairman of the Republican Party for Alcona County.

For those out there that do not know Brozowski, he has been a resident of the county for over 25 years. He retired from General Motors in 2007 and continues to work part-time as a consultant in the quality field. He also serves on the Alcona County Planning Board.

The Republican Party has scheduled the meeting room at the library in Harrisville for the fourth Monday of each month at 7 p.m. starting July 22 to restart the Republican Party meetings.

The July 22 meeting will start with a short meet and great so we can all get acquainted. We have a lot of work to do in this country to keep what we have and take back some of what we have lost.

A grass roots presentation that will help identify your hot button issues /values will be shown. This information will lead into what we can do to help the Republican Party accomplish its goals in 2014 and going forward into 2016.

Brozowski said he is looking forward to getting to know members personally and working with them to solve some of the systemic problems of the county, state and country.

"Dancing Through Life" as told by Peggy Halgren

Her northeast Michigan roots go back a long way. Laura Jean Richardson Gray was born in Alpena but the family moved to Barton City when she was very young. Thomas C. Richardson, her grandfather, had built the Barton City Hotel and lived there with his family. Just down the road, Daniel W. Richardson, Laura Jean's father, owned and operated a lumber mill. The family, including his wife Flora (Thornton) and three children, lived across the road from the mill.

Laura Jean attended the Barton City Elementary School and later graduated from Harrisville High School. When WWII came the family moved to Flint where Laura Jean studied business courses at Baker University. When the war ended the family returned to Barton City and soon after she met "Dearbornite" John Gray at a dance held at the Log Cabin Dance Hall and Bar in Lincoln. "It was love at first dance," she reminisced.

Laura Jean and John were married 54 years, raised three children and were extensively involved in their community. Among her volunteer activities she worked for the American Red Cross, helped handicapped children and Hospice. John's career with the U.S. government took the family to live in Germany for four years. While there they were able to travel extensively through Europe, Greece, Russia and the Far East.

They returned to the U.S. and lived in Virginia while John concluded his career by working at the Pentagon. Upon his retirement they once again returned to Barton City and resumed helping their community. John was elected township commissioner while Laura worked for Hospice, sang in the choir at St. Anne, took up painting and baked her own bread. Cooking was always one of her favorite interests.

While watching the 4th of July parade in Barton City some 25 years ago, Laura Jena and her sister Beverly Warner decided "the BC parade needed a little color" and they began to organize the BC Clowns. They advertised "for those who always wanted to be a clown," to take part in the Biggest Little 4th in the North Parade. Community response was immediate and soon the sisters were designing and assembling a variety of fabulous costumes in assorted sizes.

Since 1987, parade viewers have been treated to the fun and joy of watching floats, calliopes, small clown cars, banners, balloons and frolicking clowns. A woman major in the Air Force Reserve was the top performer for two years. She just knew how to have fun acting as a clown! For the last few years some of the clowns have been college boys from Ann Arbor and they have had great fun wearing special costumes designed just for them. The BC Clowns are still going strong after all these years!

Organization Notes

Alcona FFA Chapter

Last week the Alcona FFA Chapter officer team for 2013-2014 attended Region VI Officer Camp at Lost Lake Woods Club and welcomed its new FFA Advisor -- Helen-Ann Prince.

During the camp Alcona FFA officers had the opportunity to meet and work alongside other FFA chapter officers from across the region including Alpena, Benzie, Ogemaw Heights, Wexford-Missaukee and Whittemore-Prescott. The purpose of the camp is to group each officer position alike for training on the duties and requirements for the upcoming year, allow officers to get to know FFA members from across the region and elect the 2013-2014 Region VI officer team.

The camp was put on by six regional officers that were elected at last year's event including Hannah Mikazes, the 2012-2013 Alcona FFA Chapter president. Mikazes served as the 2012-2013 Region VI Secretary for the past year. Some of a regional officer's duties include planning and hosting the Region VI Camp, organizing Decathlon in the fall and helping with leadership contests in the spring.

This year Morgan Stewart was elected to serve as the 2013-2014 Region VI Reporter. Stewart is excited to serve as a regional officer and is looking forward to working alongside other FFA members from across the region. Besides helping with regional events for the upcoming year, Stewart's duties as regional reporter will entail planning and coordinating public information programs for region VI activities and events, submitting news articles to local newspapers and the Michigan FFA Creed magazine and photographing events and activities in the region.

The 2013-2014 Alcona FFA Officer Team is as follows:

President Shannon Oliver, vice-president Schuyler Bates, secretary Morgan Stewart, treasurer Brandon Sweet, reporter Rebekah

Maturen, sentinel Seth Tulgetske, historian Maire MacMaster and parliamentarian Jeremy Lickey

Blue Water Ramblers

Banjo-Jim Foerch picked up his first banjo in 1968. Since then, he has been playing since. As a founding member of the Blue Water Ramblers, Banjo-Jim was busy playing for years between 1982 and 2000. He has played in many states across America and our lives to all the people he's ever done. "Everyone in the Midwest is proud of our honor and that pride the best way we know how." R. H. "Bear" Berends holds a collection of twelve string guitars. As with the Blue Water Ramblers, Jim and Beats Settin' Home were in Michigan in 1993 and "Da Bears" have been playing since. "I wanted to sing with the Blue Water Ramblers and here we are. I lead line of a love song or harmony. The Blue Water Ramblers' soul is in the music."

“Whispers of the North”- The Gordon Lightfoot Tribute

Whispers of the North captures not only Lightfoot’s music, but also the feeling and heritage of “Up North” living. Romantic yet still family-friendly, the program offers an evening of Canadian folk, country and popular music with songs of the lakes, the woods, lost loves and broken hearts-and of course, “The Wreck of the Edmund Fitzgerald.” Four talented area musicians play the roles of Gordon Lightfoot’s stage band. Lead guitarist Todd Golnick is a detective lieutenant with the Cadillac Police Department. His guitar background is in blues and rock ‘n roll. Jack Boyd, bass guitar, was born in Waterford, Mich. He started playing bass at the age of 15 and studied music in college. George Krawczyk on keyboards has appeared in countless area musical productions on piano and organ since his move to Northern Michigan after a 23 year stint of playing and teaching in the Flint and Ann Arbor areas. He enjoys playing in jazz and easy listening roles. Matt Wohlfeill on drums and percussion has worked for the Cadillac Police Department since 1989. Among his musical tastes are Motown, blues, instrumental arrangements and vocal harmonies.

Donny Hartman Band

Donny Hartman is one of the original Michigan madmen. During the states’ rock and roll heyday in the ’60s and ’70s Donny was blazing the guitar hero trail with Dick Wagoner and The Frost. The Frost was one of, if not the most popular and visible groups in the Midwest, playing every major festival and venue. One of the founding members, Donny’s powerful vocals, showmanship and awesome guitar playing garnered him accolades, fame and guitar hero worship. Donny has influenced the music industry for decades and continues to do so 365 days a year with The Donny Hartman Band. The Donny Hartman Band performs the roots of rock n’ roll, blues and soul in a style all their won.

Use caution when using fireworks, enjoying campfires

Warm weather and family gatherings can make the Fourth of July a fun time with great memories. But before celebrating, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources is asking residents and visitors to make sure they understand the importance of fireworks and campfire safety.

According to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), 91 percent of the fires associated with fireworks over a five-year period occurred in grass, brush or dumpsters.

"With folks filling state parks, campgrounds and backyards to celebrate the Fourth of July, it's vital that precautions are taken prior to lighting campfires and setting off fireworks," said DNR fire prevention specialist Ada Takacs. "You can still have fun while celebrating with friends and family, even if you're being safe. The best way to avoid risk is to attend public fireworks displays and leave the lighting to the professionals."

When planning to use fireworks, the DNR suggests keeping these safety tips in mind:

- Sparklers can reach 1,800 degrees Fahrenheit — hot enough to melt gold. Sparklers remain hot even after the spark is gone. Always place in a bucket of water. Sparklers thrown on the ground can cause grass fires.

- Point fireworks away from homes, and keep them away from brush, leaves and flammable substances. The NFPA estimates that local fire departments respond to an average of 19,700 fires caused by fireworks each year.

- Chinese lanterns can stay airborne for 20 minutes and reach up to one mile high before coming down in unplanned locations. The open flame has the potential to start fires.

- Soak all fireworks in a bucket of water before throwing them in the trash.

Takacs said that in addition to fireworks safety, people should keep the following tips in mind when enjoying their campfires:

- Use fire rings in non-flammable areas when possible.

- Never leave a campfire unattended.

- Keep a water source and shovel nearby.

- Place roasting sticks in a bucket of water when not in use.

- Completely extinguish fires before turning in for the night. Douse with water, stir and douse again to make sure no embers are left.

"Fireworks and campfires are a great way to celebrate the Fourth of July, but you'll enjoy the holidays much more knowing that your family and your property are safe," Takacs said.

National forest prohibits use of fireworks

The U.S. Forest Service reminds residents, visitors and campers to northern Michigan that all types of fireworks are prohibited on the Huron-Manistee National Forests.

Despite recent changes to Michigan's law regulating fireworks, the prohibition on national forest system lands remains in place. No fireworks or pyrotechnic device of any kind may be discharged anywhere within the national forests, regardless of weather conditions or holidays.

All regulations relating to fireworks are strictly enforced and each violation is punishable as a misdemeanor by a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment of not more than six months or both. Forest visitors are also reminded to ensure that all fires are extinguished and cold to the touch before leaving them.

The mission of the U.S. Forest Service is to sustain the health, diversity and productivity of the nation's forests and grasslands to meet the needs of present and future generations. The agency manages 193 million acres of public land, provides assistance to state and private landowners and maintains the largest forestry research organizations in the world.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Cause of the Seasons Not Intuitive

The Earth is at aphelion or farthest from the sun on July 5 at 11 a.m., EDT. Just think about that. We will be coming off the Fourth of July celebrations with picnics, fireworks, tank tops, and togs in the fresh blush of summer, and yet we will be at our greatest distance from the sun. One of the big misconceptions that people have about the seasons is that they are a function of Earth-sun distance. Nothing could be further from the truth. They are attributed to the Earth's axial tilt which "leans" the Northern Hemisphere towards the sun in the summer, so that Sol is higher in the sky and we receive more direct energy from the sun. This also allows the sun to be visible for a longer period of time throughout the day. The net result is an excess of energy, the Northern Hemisphere warms, and everyone goes outside to play. You can demonstrate this effect with a flashlight and a wall. The wall is the Earth's surface; the flashlight represents the sun. Shine the flashlight straight down onto the wall, and note the area of the wall which the beam illuminates. Keeping the flashlight at the same distance from the wall, allow the light to strike the wall at angles which are less and less steep. You'll notice the beam expanding into an oval which will elongate itself and cover more and more wall area. It's the same energy but all spread out. This is what happens in winter when the Earth's axis "leans back." Daylight decreases, and the sun appears much lower in the sky. The energy received from the sun lessens and so do the temperatures. All of this leaning towards and away from the sun seems to indicate that the Earth's axis flips back and forth during a year's time. This is not the case at all. For now it points towards the North Star keeping the stars of the nighttime sky in step with the calendar. Oh, and how far are we from the sun on Friday, July 5? The number in miles turns out to be 94,508,200. www.astronomy.org

VA plans to end claims backlog

By Freddy Groves
 Veterans Post

As part of its transparency vow, the Department of Veterans Affairs has released statistics showing which groups of veterans are waiting for claims to be processed. The plan is to eliminate the backlog by the year 2015.

The figures bear looking at because it has a long way to go. There are 808,074 pending claims that have been received and are awaiting a decision, with a backlog of 530,075 claims -- those that have been pending for more than 125 days.

Of the pending claims, 62 percent are from veterans filing supplemental claims for additional benefits. The other 38 percent are first-time claims.

Some 77 percent of veterans filing supplemental claims are already receiving some kind of monetary benefit; 11 percent are already at 100 percent disability; while 40 percent are already rated at 50 percent or higher disability.

The veteran eras of service are as follows for pending claims, with the backlog of claims being nearly identical:

Vietnam: 36 percent
 Iraq and Afghanistan: 22 percent
 Gulf War: 23 percent
 Peacetime: 11 percent
 Other: 8 percent

To put some of these numbers in perspective: In 2010, the VA received 1.2 million claims. In 2011, VA chief Eric Shinseki added three new conditions as presumptive for Agent Orange exposure, and the VA received another 1.3 million claims. In 2012, it received 1.08 million claims.

The way I read the graphs in the Strategic Plan to Eliminate the Compensation Claims Backlog, the first fiscal quarter of 2014 (fiscal year begins Oct. 1) is when it should finally be at a point where the backlog is no longer growing. Both the backlog and pending claims then will begin to decline, sharply, like a ski slope, until the fourth fiscal quarter of 2015, when there is zero backlog.

Finding the real cost of attending college

By David Uffington
 Dollars And Sense

College Abacus was a winner of part of a $2.5 million grant from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation for its innovative college-search website. At collegeabacus.com, prospective college students plug in their information one time and the program hunts for the net cost of attending college. There is no charge.

The Higher Education Opportunity Act, passed in 2008, required schools to put a net-price calculator on their websites. But the process of determining the cost of college was still complicated, as the resulting numbers from the calculators haven't always matched the stated prices on the schools' websites.

In 2012, the U.S. Department of Education realized that all colleges had their own method of itemizing tuition, books, room and board, fees, grants and loans on their financial-aid letters, and asked colleges to adopt a standardized letter. Most colleges didn't, leaving the original problem: It's difficult to compare aid packages.

With Abacus, students can compare their projected financial-aid packages from various schools, locate schools that are within their budgets and get a closer estimate of projected costs. Abacus does this by using the actual prices quoted on the school's site, not what the estimated calculators come up with. The student enters the information from his existing aid packages into the Abacus Shopping Sheet, and the Abacus machine sorts out the numbers, giving the net price of attending each college.

Net price is defined as estimated cost (price) of attendance -- including tuition and required fees, books and supplies, room and board (meals), and other related expenses -- minus estimated grant and scholarship aid. The calculators on the Abacus site do not take loans into account.

College Abacus generates estimates for more than 2,500 post-secondary institutions in the United States. If a school isn't yet in the Abacus database, a popup note will direct you to the link at the school's site.

Many colleges now are sending electronic award letters, and Abacus is working on a way to automatically plug those numbers in from the email.

If your student hopes to complete college without being burdened for years with college loans, narrow your hunt to no-loan financial-aid colleges. More schools across the country, especially those with wealthy alumni, are putting together financial-aid packages that include money from the school, as opposed to having the student take out loans.

(David Uffington regrets that he cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into his column whenever possible. Send e-mail to columnreply2@gmail.com.)

After years of trying to keep the flag pole at the Caledonia Township Hall in good condition, the Caledonia Township Hall Board agreed to have a new, 30 foot aluminum flag pole installed. The work was done recently (left) by Rocket enterprise, Inc. of Warren, Mich. The new pole is in place (above) -- just in time for the Fourth of July celebration. Courtesy photos.
