One teacher retires, two begin at Alcona schools

new special education teachers this year and said goodbye to another.

Jon Webb retired in February after teaching for 19 years at the school. Webb mainly taught special education classes but also taught Spanish, fitness classes and coached cross country run-

Webb, a canoe racing enthusiast and runner, said he really enjoyed teaching and especially liked teaching the fitness classes and coaching.

Webb taught "Fit for Life" classes at the school -- something he strongly believes in for himself and others. He plans to continue his quest to stay fit and help others with their fitness challenges by coaching through an online site called Team Beachbody. Webb is optimistic about the program's possibilities.

Now that he is retired, he and his wife, Sarah, plan to spend a bit more time with their grandchild in New York, but they have no plans to move anywhere. "We're staying put in Hubbard Lake for a while, this area has too much to offer," Webb said.

Interacting with the Alcona students and sharing their success were what Webb truly loved about teaching. "The students were very kind and giving. I was very fortunate because I had great students to teach. I just want to continue staying fit and helping others. There's no moss growing under this stone. Today we went to Bay City and I completed the Irish Double, an 8K race followed by a 5K race. We're having a lot of fun. We're just going to keep on paddling."

The new teachers at the school agree exercise is important for body and mind. Both Lauren Telfer and Karen Martindale try to stay as fit as possible.

Telfer, who is the new special education teacher for Alcona Elementary enjoys working out in Oscoda at the Michigan Fit Club. She said the exercise helps reduce stress and gives her mind time to release from her active day of teaching.

Telfer has been teaching at the school since January and said she is already seeing progress in most of her students. "We have some very creative young boys and girls. They are so much fun to work with and they keep me on my toes. I'm up for anything and ready for the challenge," Telfer said. Her work focuses on teaching reading, writing and math with kindergarten through sixth-grade students who are having difficulty keeping up in class.

Telfer received her undergraduate degree from Oakland University and just finished her master's degree in special education/cognitive impairments from Eastern Michigan University. Before taking the assignment in Alcona, she taught for two and a half years at Jackson County Intermediate School District working with severely multiple impaired students from 14 to 21 years of age.

Although she grew up in Saline, Mich., she's not totally unfamiliar with the area. Her grandparents, Ken and Mary Fischer, have a summer home on Lake Huron and she spent many weeks during her childhood summer vacations visiting with

Karen Martindale

When Telfer isn't teaching or exercising she enjoys spending time with her dog, Louie, and learning more about the area.

Karen Martindale enjoys cross fit training and running, but has been somewhat immobilized with a dislocated knee. The injury hasn't slowed her down. She's energized and ready to start her new career and life in Alcona

Alcona FFA members compete at state level

By Mary Weber Staff Writer

The Alcona Schools FFA Chapter was well represented last week at the Michigan FFA State Convention held at Michigan State University.

Of the 50 members which make up the Alcona FFA Chapter, 11 members attended and competed with over 2,000 other FFA members from across the state.

Prince, Alcona FFA advisor, six Alcona FFA members competed in leadership contests, three submitted displays for the Supervised Agricultural Experience (SAE) Showcase and more. Prince said she was proud of the students' achievements at the state level, especially the Parliamentary Procedure Team, comprised of juniors competing at their third state convention.

The Parliamentary Procedure Team of Hannah Riggs, Maire MacMaster, Rebekah Maturen, Seth Tulgetske and Shannon Oliver, came in ninth place winning the silver award in the state competition. The team placed first at the district level competition and second at the regional level.

Jeremy Lickey placed eighth winning a silver award for Prepared Public Speaking. Outstanding Junior Degrees were given to Shannon Oliver and Morgan Stewart.

Prince explained the degree was determined by the junior's 15 page application, their SAE and grade point average in agricultural classes. Oliver and Stewart also won the Academic Excellence silver award determined by their grade point According to Helen-Ann average and involvement in agricultural classes.

The SAE showcase participants were David Lindsay and Madison Lane with their combined "Laying hens from a production standpoint" showcase and Morgan Stewart with a showcase explaining "Agriculture education in the process of raising rabbits." Stewart received a silver SAE Proficiency Award in the Agricultural Education category.

Maire MacMaster, Alcona FFA chapter historian, welcomed the opportunity to attend the state competition for the third time. "It's just such a great experience. It's so cool to compete with so many different people. Coming from a small school district, it's fun to go to a giant convention and see so many

Robert Gottfried, better known to thousands of kids as "Rob the Drummer," came to Alcona schools last week and had elementary students clapping, stomping and shouting with delight. Magazine, and many other national and cable television and radio programs. Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

State Rep. Pettalia recently wrote that constituent Abigail Thomas was confused about his stance on a citizens' ballot initiative that would have Michigan join the ranks of most other states by having a part-time legislature. I attended the same meeting with Mr. Pettalia and verify that Ms. Thomas accurately conveyed Mr. Pettalia's response to the question.

It's very simple. He stated that he is opposed to a parttime legislature because he felt it would decrease the ability of northern Michigan to be fairly represented in Lansing. He confirmed this in his letter when he wrote, "In regards to a part-time legislature, I feel this will hurt northern Michigan even more."

I invite Mr. Pettalia to think more about this response since it makes no difference in the level of proportional representation whether the legislature is full-time or parttime. Both the southern and northern portions of the state will have part-time legislators. The real issue is why does Michigan waste millions of dollars on a full-time legislature when nearly all other states are able to function just fine with a part-time legislature? Come November, I plan on voting for the citizens' initiative for a part-time legislature. That way our representatives can spend less time in Lansing and more time listening to their constituents.

Patty Thomas Harrisville

To the Editor,

I saw something twice at the basketball games last week that I must tell you about. I have long been an Alcona High School basketball fan and attend many other games as well. This message is to all of the so called adults reading the paper.

During a game at Oscoda when Alcona was playing but Oscoda was not, I saw a group of young Oscoda fans join the Alcona fans in cheering for the Alcona team. I thought that was very classy on the part of Oscoda. The following night when Oscoda was playing and Alcona was not, I saw a group of young Alcona fans join the Oscoda cheering section and I thought that was also a class act.

The disturbing thing was that some adults thought that was wrong by both groups of fans. What can be wrong with cheering for your neighboring school when your own school is not playing? Are all of the problems coming from the adults? It looks like the kids have the answers while the adults are trying to spread hate and disrespect.

I believe that high school sports should be about playing as well as you can and when it is over you shake your opponent's hand and await the next game.

Is all of this negative stuff coming from the college scene where money rules and they teach that you are not only trying to beat your opponent but you should also show no respect for them and should actually not like them?

I heard through the grape vine that some of the kids got reprimanded for this behavior and if that is true I think that those who did the reprimanding should be reprimanded themselves. Come on adults, show some class and grow up.

How to fight age discrimination

Dear Savvy Senior,

What constitutes age discrimination in the workplace, and where can I turn to for help if I think I've got a case? Demoted at 64

Dear Demoted.

Age discrimination has become a much more frequent complaint in recent years as more and more people are working into their retirement years. But, you need to be aware that proving it is extremely difficult to do, especially since the 2009 Supreme Court decision that raised the bar for the type of legal proof that workers need to win age discrimination lawsuits.

With that said, here are the steps you'll need to take to fight age discrimination if you think you've been treated unlawfully.

The Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) is your first defense against age discrimination. This is a federal law that says an employer cannot fire, refuse to hire, or treat you differently more employees - including than other employees because of your age. Some examples of age discrimination

- You were fired because your boss wanted to keep younger workers who are paid
- You were turned down for a promotion, which went to someone younger hired from outside the company, because the boss says the company "needs new blood."
- When company layoffs are announced, most of the persons laid off were older, while younger workers with less seniority and less onthe-job experience were kept
- Before you were fired, your supervisor made agerelated remarks about you.
- · You didn't get hired because the employer wanted a younger-looking person to do the job.

The ADEA protects all workers and job applicants age 40 and over who work for employers that have 20 or federal, state and local governments as well as employment agencies and labor

If your workplace has fewer than 20 employees, you may still be protected under your state's anti-age discrimination law. Contact your state labor department or your state's fair employment practices agency for more information.

Another protection for older workers is the federal Older Workers Benefit Protection Act. Under this law, an employer cannot reduce health or life insurance benefits for older employees, nor can it stop their pensions from accruing if they work past their normal retirement age. It also discourages businesses from targeting older workers when cutting staff and prohibits employers from forcing employees to take early retirement.

If you think you are a victim of employment age discrimination, your first step is to file a charge with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) usually within 180 days from the date of the alleged violation. You can do this by mail or in person at your nearest EEOC office (see www.eeoc.gov/contact), or by calling 800-669-4000. They will help you through the filing process and let you know if you should also file a charge with your state antidiscrimination agency.

Once the charge is filed, the EEOC will investigate your complaint and find either reasonable cause to believe that age discrimination has occurred, or no cause and no basis for a claim. After the investigation, the EEOC will then send you their findings along with a "noticeof-right-to-sue," which gives you permission to file a lawsuit in a court of law.

If you decide to sue, you'll need to hire a lawyer who specializes in employee discharge suits. Lawyers.com and Findlaw.com are two websites that can help you locate discrimination attorneys in your area.

Another option you should consider is mediation, which is a fair and efficient way to help you resolve your em-

Remember...

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep Columnist

It came to me this week that if I'd realized just how much I would forget in a lifetime, I'd have taken better notes.

I don't know how many people actually think about their memory, but I've always had a distinct mental image of mine. It's a drab cement block room with elderly shag carpeting, crowded with mismatched file cabinets and stacks of lawyer's file boxes. On a couple of old steel armysurplus partner desks, stacks of papers are piled, still to be processed. The only décor is a rickety potted palm and a wall calendar, often turned to the wrong month.

The file folders in the cabinets are carefully compiled, but the contents are something of a mess. Notes scrawled on paper napkins, crumpled Post-its and matchbook covers. A single page of a paperback book, the scribbles in the available margin space not related to the book's subject in any way. Unidentified photographs and old negatives. The actual 8 x 10 documents start out on lined notebook paper, then advance to pages typewritten on brown newsprint and a whole history of various printer styles.

The staff that run the place are pretty good, especially when you consider the outdated equipment they're stuck with. Of course, like everyone else, they have their little problems.

Not long ago, for example, I happened upon a television commercial. I can't tell you what it was for – a telephone or a computer or something technological. The crux of the thing was the line: "The powerful play goes on, and you may contribute a verse."

I knew that...but from where? I closed my eyes, which sometimes speeds up the process. But the folks in the memory room were having a day. They knew where the information was, of course. But the file drawer was stuck. Something had apparently wedged itself above the file line and no amount of pulling was releasing it. They'd dispatched someone to the cafeteria to find some sort of long, slender tool and in the meantime, they were sorry, but I'd just have to wait.

In the meantime, I tried a method that sometimes works. Don't think about it and it will come to you. It was like trying to keep your tongue off a sore truth. The powerful play goes on, my mind drummed steadily, the powerful play goes on. An hour and a half later, Larry up in memory (the skinny guy whose suit pants are always a little too short) popped the drawer with a bent iced tea spoon and dispatched the answer.

"Walt Whitman!" I told Art, triumphantly. Art, who is used to such things, just nod-ded. I suppose it would have been much faster to just look it up, but I have a lot of faith in the staff up there. There are times, though, when they get behind on the current processing. That's not surprising when you consider the amount of information that comes in daily – stuff from the Internet and television, reading material, the everyday images and conversations around us.

Accordingly, I've learned that if I have a great idea for a column on Tuesday, I should write it down somewhere. Otherwise, on Thursday, when I attempt to retrieve it, I may find that the memory room is having one of those authorized workdays when they're clearly in there, the lights are on, but they're not answering the phone.

On the other hand, they're pretty good at pulling up stuff I need – and sometimes stuff I didn't even know I needed. I attribute a lot of the latter to Alice Anne, the oldest staffer who's been with me throughout. From time to time, she pulls some little item on her own initiative and pops it out to me in a mental e-mail.

That happened last week as I was driving home from the store, feeling overheated in my winter coat for the first time in a very long time. The document Alice pulled up was damaged – torn in half. The author, title and even the subject matter of the novel was missing. But the thought, which I'd loved in that particular novel, was there.

Every summer, the author had said, there comes a day when you wake to feel the spirit of fall in the air. A day to stay inside for a nap or a game of Scrabble, a night for a fire. The next day may dawn hot and sunny, but you know in your heart that summer's back has been broken.

I thought last week that the same could be said of winter. I'm not such a fool as to think one 40 degree day a spring makes. We could still see snowstorms – even blizzards. But winter's back has been broken, and eventually, it will end. I sent Alice Anne a little thank you for that one – it was great it was great. I said at the beginning of this piece that if I'd known how much I'd forget, I'd have taken better notes, but it's probably not true. When I get a new mind toy, I always think I'll remember it forever. Take for example a Polish phrase shared by one of my "almost daughters" a while ago. "Not my circus. Not my monkeys." It came with a codicil I also loved. Strictly translated, she said, it's "Not my monkey." But, she said, it was probably corrupted because a onemonkey circus just seemed

There are just so many things this would apply to. Congress, for example. Spats within the family or the most recent local contretemps. And the image of that lonely, one-monkey circus will come in handy someday, too. I just know it. Fortunately, when I come across that happy circumstance where it perfectly describes the situation, Alice Anne will find it for me again. (God help me if she ever takes her retirement.)

Mary, the third staff member is coming along, too. She tends to specialize in Bible verses, old sermon topics, poetry and lyrics and the other more nebulous ephemera. She's quiet, but really good at her job. Let someone I care about pass and I'll find she's assembled a whole folder of things that she shyly offers might help me out. Oftentimes, I find that by the time I sit down to write, I can just open the folder and begin.

All in all, I think they're still running a pretty tidy little ship up there. They get a little rowdy once a year at the annual Christmas party, which may explain the file of bad puns and the fact that the long version of "Born To Be Wild" gets stuck in my head from time to time, but they remain an otherwise competent group, I think. We may have to look into hiring someone soon (or find an intern, maybe) to keep track of just what it was I went into a given room to get, but that's okay.

I just know I'd rather have their little memos and the scraps they send from time to time than a huge stack of meticulously dated and maintained notebooks of informa-

As to the fact that I have (and have always had) a whole little imaginary department operating inside my head, well that may require further examination of a different part of my brain entirely.

Don't worry about me, though. I'll make a mental note to look into it.

(Kathryn Kniep has contributed to the Alcona County Review for more than 30 years. She has published fiction, nonfiction and poetry in several venues. She and her husband, Art, live in Harrisville.)

other FFA members who are equally as passionate about FFA as we are," MacMaster said.

MacMaster explained the convention always gives her a positive impact and she enjoys listening to the inspirational speakers. She said it was interesting to hear state and national officers tell them how the FFA made a difference in their lives and helped to shape their futures.

MacMaster will have her own FFA success stories to share in the future. The junior said before joining the FFA she stumbled over her words and could never imagine being comfortable during an interview or talking in front of a large audience of people. "Just the thought of having to do that would have made me cry. I was just not outgoing," MacMaster said. Now she is an accomplished speaker because of many hours practicing and receiving positive response through the FFA.

Prince said the students received a special tour of Spartan Stadium which was organized by Connor Hubbard, a former Alcona FFA Chapter officer and former Michigan FFA state officer. She also thanked chaperones Jaci Fitzgerald, Charlene Oliver and Sally Lickey.

Martindale is the new resource room teacher to middle school through twelfth-grade students who have learning disabilities. The resource room is a sub category of special education which focuses on the students capable of obtaining a high school diploma.

The resource room special education students tend to have issues such as attention deficit hyperactivity disorder or other learning disabilities which make it more difficult than the average student to earn a diploma.

There is another special education class, taught by Rick Sedgwick, who took over Jon Webb's students with cognitive impairments. According to Martindale, Sedgwick's students will most likely receive a certificate of completion rather than a diploma due to their impairments.

Martindale said moving to Alcona County is quite different from the life she lived growing up just outside of Chicago, Illinois and graduating from high school with a class of 1,000. She's excited about living in a rural community and learning more about it.

Martindale is a graduate of Eastern Michigan University and holds a bachelor's degree in special education. She minored in math and reading. Before coming to Alcona, she worked two temporary positions covering for teachers who were on maternity leave at the Plymouth-Canton School District.

What Martindale lacks in experience she makes up for with enthusiasm for her students and coworkers.

"Whenever a new teacher comes into a classroom, especially in the middle of the school year, there is always going to be some hiccups. Whether you are a kid or an adult, change is hard. Some students took to me right away and some it took a week or two to warm up and get used to the situation. They have responded really well to the change. They are asking me to help them more, which is great is great.

"I had a student today who wanted to show Mr. Sedgwick his grades because he was so proud of them. That's great to see. (The student) failed most of his classes last year and now has As, Bs and Cs in everything. I can't take credit for it, I've only been here a month, but what I see is the kids here are very hard workers and trying to do their best," Martindale said.

In her spare time Martindale enjoys crocheting and cooking when she isn't cross fit training or running. She also enjoys spending time with her cat, Sylvester.

Both new teachers are motivated to keep their students on a positive path. They appreciate the warm welcome they have received so far and all the help they have been offered. They like the area, despite the hard winter, and are anxious to get to know the people in their new community and participate in the amenities the Alcona area has to offer.

Northeast Michigan

Fishing Report

Northeast Lower Peninsula

• AuSable River: Anglers have caught steelhead but the action was quite slow at times. Most are using wax worms or spawn. The ramp on Rea Road is useable but 4-wheel drive is needed. There is still quite a bit of ice between the Whirlpool and the pier.

With the ongoing changes in weather, anglers should anticipate flow variations below Foote Dam. Extreme cold has caused difficulties in operating the spill gates at the Foote Hydroelectric project which, in turn, cause unexpected flow changes when they are opened or closed. There is the potential for rapid flow changes due to the breakup of ice cover which causes ice dams and the temporary impounding of water followed by rapid flow when these blockages release wa-

Those steelhead fishing on the lower river should check the USGS website for current flow conditions. waterdata.usgs.gov/mi/nwis/rt.

• Higgins Lake: Still has lots of ice. Lake trout are hitting on grays in 90 to 100 feet. Those targeting white-fish on the bottom have done well with wigglers, wax worms or spawn in 85 to 100 feet. Rainbow trout have been caught near the Conference Center. Try wigglers in shallow waters about a foot deep. For perch, try off Evergreen Park on the north end or around the Sunken Island. Use minnows, wigglers and wax worms in waters 50 to 70 feet deep or more.

• Tawas: Some perch were caught inside the harbor. Keepers were running six to eight inches but some caught a few bigger fish. A couple of pike were speared or taken on tip-ups off Jerry's Marina.

• AuGres: A few walleye anglers were fishing off Booth Road. Perch anglers caught a few nice fish in seven feet of water off the mouth of the Rifle River and in six feet of water straight off Palmer Road. Most fish were seven to 10 inches. Walleye were caught in seven to 15 feet mostly in the evening.

Alcona High School junior Leigh Gibson, 17, competed in the Bowling State Championships in Battle Creek, Mich. Of the 60 participants, Gibson finished in 50th position. It was his first venture at the state level of competition. As a member of the Alcona bowling club he finished in the top 10 during district tournaments. He averages a 174 score. He also participates in baseball and football at the school and enjoys hiking and bicycle riding. Gibson started bowling at the age of 10 and enjoyed watching his parents, Tony and Lynn Gibson bowl. He said bowling at the state level was fun and he met a lot of people from all over Michigan. Gibson is hoping to receive a scholarship through bowling and has future plans of attending the police academy and becoming a state trooper. Photo by Mary Weber.

Access to information should be common goal for better government

By Charles Hill

Guest Columnist

If you've been watching what goes on in Washington and some statehouses across the country, you might wonder if there's any issue that everyone should be able to agree on whether they are conservative or liberal or libertarian, Democrat or Republican, pro-this or anti-that.

There is: It's the need for transparency in all levels of government.

As we observe Sunshine Week in Michigan and around the country to encourage openness in government, the Michigan Coalition for Open Government (MiCOG) is urging citizens and public officials to seek transparency in the operations of their local and state governments, their schools and universities, their federal government and their courts.

You can do this by supporting Michigan legislation that would amend the Michigan Freedom of Information

Auto/ATV Repossession

Guest Columnist By Charles Hill

Act (FOIA) to make government information more accessible by limiting fees and discouraging delays.

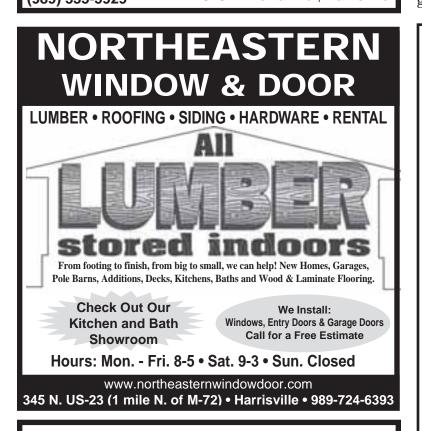

Or by supporting a bill that a Republican lawmaker proposed to create an Open Government Commission to hear FOIA appeals. Or by supporting a bill that two Democratic lawmakers proposed to expand FOIA coverage for the legislative branch so it is more in line with the broader coverage that applies to the executive branch.

MiCOG—a non-profit, taxexempt organization open to citizens, journalists and associations concerned with open government and freedom of information – urges passage of that pending legislation.

You also can make a difference by letting your local officials — from the mayor to school board members — know that it's important to you to know how your tax dollars are being spent and how they are making decisions about classrooms or parks or roads or snow removal or trash collection.

It's important for you to know this so you can independently judge the sound-

Non-denominational

New license structure for outdoor activities

As of March 1, Michigan sportsmen and women will see something they haven't witnessed in many years: Changes to the state's hunting, fishing and Off Road Vehicle (ORV) license options a lineup that hadn't undergone real change since 1997.

The first thing customers will notice is an easier-tonavigate number of license choices - from 227 down to just over 40. Individual archery deer and firearm deer licenses? Gone. Restricted fishing license? Ditto. Pricing on several items has changed, too; some prices have risen, some remain the same, and others have decreased.

DNR Director Keith Creagh said the changes will provide valuable support for the work the DNR does in close cooperation with partner organi-

"World-class natural resources belong to everybody in Michigan and define who we are as a state," Creagh said. "Those resources are fundamental to why people live in, visit and set up shop in Michigan - and that's vital to our state and local economies.

"We want to make it easier for people to get the licenses they need and ensure the funding that will allow the DNR and our partners to enhance and protect our natural resources for current and future generations," he said.

New for Hunters

All hunters will be required to purchase a base license, with different price points for resident, junior, senior and nonresident hunters. The base license (which allows the buyer to hunt small game) is needed to purchase any other licenses. Deer hunters will have the option of buying one deer license ($20) or twodeer licenses ($40). Hunters may choose one option or the other.

The single deer license replaces the separate firearm and archery season licenses of previous years, and is valid for archery, firearm and muzzleloader seasons. Hunters who opt for the single tag won't be able to purchase a second, but they will be able to purchase antlerless licenses where available.

With the two-tag deer combo license, both licenses are valid for archery, firearm and muzzleloader seasons. It includes one regular and one restricted license, as in previous years. Antler point restrictions will apply based on the area of the state.

Antlerless deer licenses cost $20, and will continue to be available based on license quotas set for each deer management unit (DMU); quotas should be finalized in July.

New for Anglers

The two previous options for fishing licenses - one for everything except trout and salmon and another that included trout and salmon have been rolled into one license. A resident fishing license will cost $26 and includes fishing for trout and salmon (down from $28 if you bought the all-species license under the old system). A one-day fishing license will cost just $10.

New fishing licenses are required beginning April 1.

The hook-and-bullet crowd can try the hunt/fish combo (the base license, a fishing license and two deer tags), which is available for $76, a modest savings compared to buying them separately.

Discounts on some licenses will be available for youths and seniors. Active military and veterans with head out on state trails, 100-percent disability who dents will also be eligible for free licenses.

New for Off-roaders

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Dissecting Orion's Sword

through Friday, with the highest temperature of 83° in Yuma, Ariz.

Orion the Hunter continues to be center stage in the south right after darkness, but it will not be there for long. The rapidly increasing light of spring and Orion's daily westward motion, due to Earth revolution around the sun, will squeeze it from visibility in the evening sky in just one more month. Look for Orion's three belt stars, top to bottom—Mintaka, Alnilam, and Alnitak, mid-sky and just a little to the west of south. Beneath his belt is Orion's more elusive sword, which appears to the unaided eye from suburban locales as three fainter stars, but when viewed through binoculars or small telescopes, resolve themselves into star clusters and nebulae. By far, the most famous is the Orion Nebula (M42), 24 light years in diameter and 1,350 light years distant. It is a birthing place for stars. Its Trapezium cluster contains five 15-40 solar mass stars visible through small telescopes, but Theta1 C Orionis, containing 40 times more hydrogen than our sun, is the standout, in binoculars. Its "surface" temperature exceeds 80,000 degrees F., and its luminosity equals 250,000 suns. It is destined to supernova in about one million years. Just above the Orion Nebula is M43, structurally tied to M42, but separated by a dark lane of dust. Target this area with a telescope. The Running Man, NGC 1977, a small cluster of related stars forms the top of Orion's sword to the unaided eye. Through binoculars three tightly packed luminaries can be seen with an additional star above and to the right. Photography reveals a beautiful blue reflection nebula associated with the dust through which the brightest star, 42 Orionis, is shining. Below the sword lies Iota Orionis, a naked eye star, which is associated with a very faint nebulosity, NGC 1980, not easily seen even through large telescopes. All of this and more lies easily within one binocular field of view in your evening sky tonight. www.astronomy.org

Dollars And Sense By David Uffington

Late filing taxes? you're not alone taxes yet, you're not alone. One quarter of Americans wait until the last two weeks to get taxes done and filed.

At this point, you have a choice: get them done quickly and file before April 15, or ask for an extension.

If you want to get it over with and do your taxes now, you'll need to gather your W-2 or 1099 forms, 1099 statements for interest, Social Security number, and your pile of receipts if you plan to deduct expenses, Medical Savings Account information, self-employed health insurance and home-office costs, and real-estate taxes.

Decide if you'll use a tax preparer. If so, make a call right away to be sure there's still time in what's likely to be a busy schedule. You'll likely save money if you do the organizing yourself, but be sure you have time to get that done before accepting the appointment.

If you want to do your taxes yourself with a computer software program, read the details online for programs like TurboTax, H&R Block and TaxACT. Be sure your computer is powerful enough to handle the software by reading the requirements before you buy. Most of the programs are easy enough to follow. Some are better than others when it comes to assistance if you get into a jam.

If you haven't filed your TurboTax, for example, has an online question and answer area where you can search for similar questions others have asked, or you can ask your own question.

> If this is your first time using computer tax software, be sure to get the program updates. Follow the steps and let the program ask you questions, even if they don't seem to apply. Go through all the steps, entering information as you go. At the end you'll be asked if you want to print out the return to be mailed or if you want to e-file.

> If for some reason there's just no way you'll get your taxes completed on time, you can file for a six-month extension. Beware: This is an extension to file your complete return, not to pay the taxes you owe. Failing to file will get you a penalty. Failing to pay on time gets you penalties and interest and scrutiny from the Internal Revenue Service. You'll need Form 4868 (available to print out at www.irs.gov) to request a filing extension and to pay your estimated tax due.

Veterans Post By Freddy Groves

Prescription drugs by mail from the VA

You can get your prescription drugs from the Department of Veterans Affairs by mail. That's good ... and bad.

The good news: A recent study by J.D. Powers gives the VA outpatient pharmacy the highest score for customer satisfaction. The VA scored 871 out of 1,000 points for pricing, order process and customer service. The VA also made the top scores in 2010, 2011 and 2012.

Clearly, getting your medications from the VA's mailorder services can be a positive experience.

But not always.

The bad news: Your order isn't as secure as stepping down the street to your local pharmacy or picking up your drugs right at the VA.

A UPS driver in Maine is going to jail for taking oxycodone drugs sent from the VA's mail order program.

A fast search of Google found far too many cases of veterans' mailed drugs being stolen around the country. In one case, a postal worker was both stealing and selling the drugs on the mail route. In Chattanooga, Tenn., a postal worker who also is a veteran on medication said his drugs, sent monthly, had been disappearing right out of the post office where he works. In Indianapolis, a postal worker was nabbed for taking drugs out of 17 packages in the VA mail-order program. In another case, a 24-year employee of the post office stole more than 2,000 pills destined for veterans.

The Maine UPS driver was caught, literally, bluehanded. Authorities had put a blue dye pack in the package, which exploded in his face when he opened it. He was taking the drugs when agents came through the door.

If you get your medications by mail, you can now track them. Go online to MyHealtheVet web portal.

The new license package, which went into effect March 1, will help the Michigan Department of Natural Resources reinvest revenue into Michigan's natural resources. ments of both inland and Great Lakes waters.

- Hunters will benefit from more habitat improvement projects for both big game and small game, increased target-shooting opportunities at state game areas, and expanded access to hunting opportunities on public and private land.
- All outdoor recreation enthusiasts will benefit from the presence of additional conservation officers across the state.
- · ORV users will see an expanded trail system, as well as existing trails that are safer because of better grooming, brushing, signage and overall maintenance (including the replacement of failing bridges and culverts).

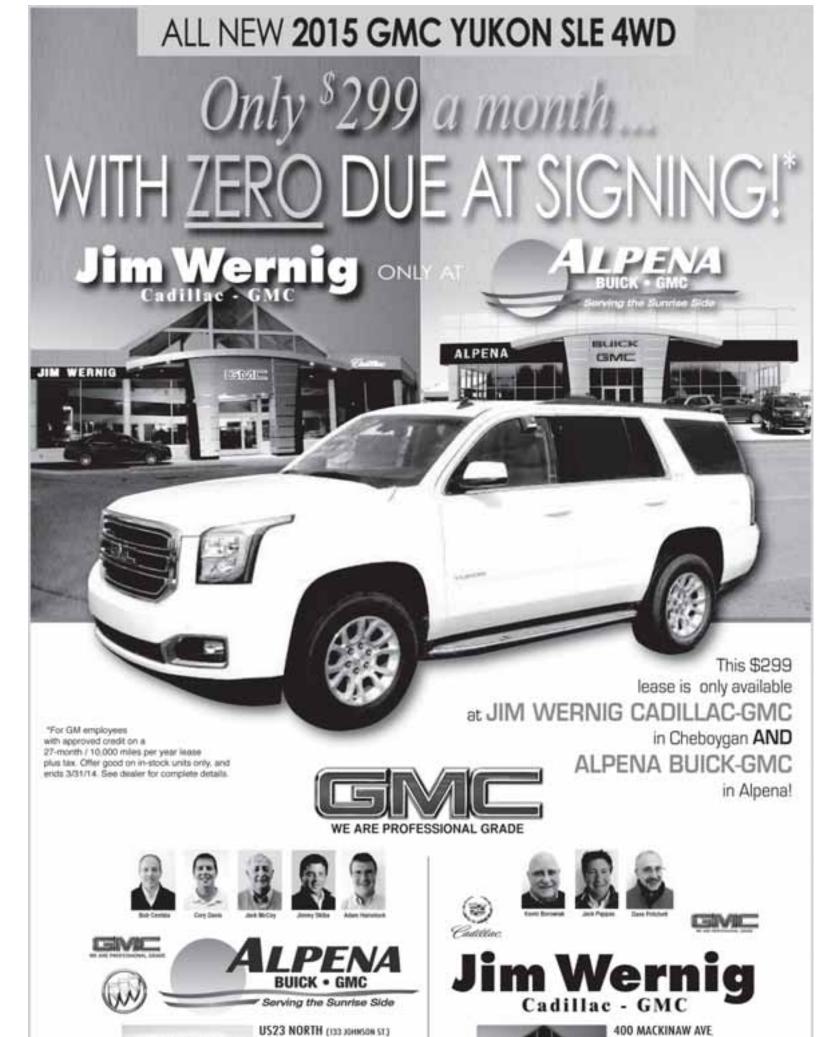

Changes like these - along with a grant program devoted to improvement of the state's wildlife and aquatic habitat are exactly what the DNR had in mind. The department saw a broad range of outdoors, conservation and environmental groups lend their support to the restructured license package last year, in anticipation of just such deliverables.

Michigan's new pricing structure is also accompanied by an easier, faster buying process. Retail license agents' terminal screens have been streamlined to clearly show available choices with new help options should an issue arise - and many of these changes were made in direct response to customers' requests and suggestions of how to best improve the system.

Sportsmen and women will only be able to purchase the licenses they qualify for, which DNR Licensing and Reservations Manager Denise Gruben says will eliminate potential confusion.

"Our customers can take advantage of the mobile buying experience for smart phones and tablets, adding a whole new level of ease," Gruben said. "When you buy your license on a mobile device, it will save as a PDF on that device. You can print and laminate if you want, or just save it on your device to conveniently show an officer, if asked."

To learn more about the new license structure - including pricing charts, frequently asked questions, and how the revenue will be used visit www.michigan.gov/ dnr and click on "Learn about the restructuring of hunting, fishing and ORV licenses."
