Alcona to receive millions in national opioid settlement

Lawsuits filed by Timothy Smith of Smith & Johnson, Attorneys PC on behalf of 36 northern Michigan municipalities will bring in over $26 million to those cities and with counties nearly demic these companies created and for future prevention and treatment of opioid addiction in our communities.

A press release issued by mith & Johnson explained the master settlement agreement between the municipalities and these four defendants requires the monies to be used for a variety of abatement measures approved by the Federal Court in Cleveland, Ohio. This settlement is the first of its kind to administer resources directly to the state and local governments specifically for relief programs to help rebuild the devastation caused by the Editor Law enforcement authorities have charged a second person in the death of a twoyear-old child.

Adrienne Renee Pavelka, 22, of Glennie was arrested Thursday, July 28 in Lenawee County and arraigned in 81st District Court.

According to Alcona County Prosecutor Thomas Weichel, she was charged with first degree murder "for the death of her two-year-old child."

The Michigan State Police investigation by Dt. Sgt. James Lively and Dt. Sgt. Anthony Utt alleges that Pavelka "had knowledge of or was involved with the death of the child and was a flight risk."

According to Weichel, this felony complaint stems from allegations that she aided Aaron Joseph Trout in taking the life of her child. Trout, 31, of Glennie was charged with the child's homicide on July 25. The murder investigation began in the mid-morning hours on Friday, July 22 when Michigan State Police (MSP) troopers dispatched were to MyMichigan Medical Center in Alpena at the request of the Alpena Police Department.

According to F/Lt. John Grimshaw, commander of the MSP Alpena post, the child was taken to the hospital but was deceased when law enforcement arrived.

Bond was denied to Trout. A preliminary examination is scheduled in 81st District Court on Wednesday, Aug. 10.

sibility." No preliminary exam was scheduled as of press time

"I'd like to thank to MSP detective sergeants Lively and Utt and the state police for their work on this case. They mobilized law enforcement forces in a relatively short time (on July 22) to investigate the death of this child," Weichel said.

Water test: One fish, two fish – where are all the whitefish?

By Kurt Williams

Capital News Service Three men pull a fat-tired wagon filled with scientific equipment through the sand of Muskegon's Pere Marquette beach. Dressed in layers against the late spring cold, their camo-print chest waders lend a rocking character to their gait not typical of beachgoers.

"It's one of the most fun things we get to do in our jobs," said Steve Pothoven, a fishery biologist at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's (NOAA) Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory and what supports them early in their life," said Pothoven.

They study the problem at familiar and popular beaches - places like Pere Marquette and Grand Haven State Park.

They get to work. Dunnuck hits the water. Walking straight into the lake, he drags 150 feet of seine net weighted on the bottom, the water rising to his chest. Turning left, he walks parallel to shore, the net unfurling, forming a crescent as he returns to shore. He and Elliot pull in the net, gathering up any fish in its path.

On shore they open the net to assess their haul. On this Understanding the decline of lake whitefish recruitment is important as fishery managers and regulators approach the deadline to update a 2000 consent decree regulating recreational and commercial fishing in lakes Huron and Michigan.

Prized for its mild flavor, finding whitefish on the menu of local restaurants is an im-

Pothoven and fellow researchers Jeff Elliott and Aaron Dunnuck work beaches along Lake Michigan in May and June, studying how well young lake whitefish grow to be adults.

They rapidly identify and count all the fish, keeping the whitefish and tossing the rest back.

Dunnuck heads back into the water with a small net on a pole with a small jar on the end to sweep through the water. He's collecting zooplankton-baby lake whitefish food - to see what's out there for them to eat.

Lake whitefish compose 95 percent of sales of commercially caught fish in Michigan, with a dockside value of just over $4 million, Sea Grant, Michigan reported in 2020.

For members of tribal communities, lake whitefish are much more than a source of income. The fish have been integral to their diet and culture for thousands of years. Understanding why young

Hiring an in-home helper for an aging parent

Dear Savvy Senior, I would like to hire an inhome helper for my 82-yearold mother to assist with household chores like housekeeping, grocery shopping and driving her to the doctor, etc. But mom doesn't require any personal/physical caregiving, nor does she require any home medical care. Any tips to help us find someone? Searching Sarah

Dear Searching,

Getting your mother some help at home to handle some of her day-to-day chores is a smart idea that can make a big difference keeping her independent longer. Here's are some tips to help you find someone reliable.

In-Home Help

For seniors who could use some help at home - but don't need a caregiving aide for personal care – there are homemakers/home helpers you can hire that can help make life a little easier.

Most in-home helpers can assist with any number of things like shopping, runningerrands, transportation, light housekeeping, laundry, meal preparation, arranging services (home maintenance, lawn care, etc.) and other household chores, along with providing companionship and support. And, if your mom gets to the point she needs personal/physical care like bathing or dressing, many home helpers can assist with this too.

Most home helpers are part time workers who work a few hours a day or a few days per week.

You also need to know that while Medicare does cover home health care services if a doctor orders it, they do not cover in-home homemaker/ helper services.

There are two ways in which you can go about hiring someone for your mom; either through a home care agency, or you can hire someone directly on your own.

Home Care Agency

Hiring a home helper through a non-medical home care, or non-medical companion care agency is the easiest, but most expensive option of the two. Costs typically run anywhere from $15 to $25 an hour depending on where you live.

How it works is you pay the company, and they handle everything including assigning appropriately trained and pre-screened staff to care for your mother and finding a fill-in on days her helper cannot come.

Some of the drawbacks, however, are that you may not have much input into the selection of the aide, and the helpers may change or alternate, which can cause a disruption.

To find a home care agency in your area, use search engines like Google or Yahoo and type in "non-medical home care" followed by the city and state your mom lives in. Or you can use Medicare's home health services search tool at Medicare.gov/carecompare - click on "home health services." Most home health agencies offer some form of non-medical home care services too. You can also check your local yellow pages under "home health services."

Hiring Directly

Hiring a personal assistant/home helper on your own is the other option, and it's less expensive. Costs typically range between $12 and $20 per hour. Hiring directly also gives you more control over who you hire so you can choose someone who you feel is right for your mom.

But be aware that if you do hire someone on your own, you become the employer so there's no agency support to fall back on if a problem occurs or if the assistant doesn't show up. You're also responsible for paying payroll taxes and any worker-related injuries that may happen. If you choose this option, make sure you check the person's references thoroughly and do a criminal background check.

To find someone, ask for referrals through friends or vou can search online at sites like Care.com or CareLinxSavvy

For more information on hiring in-home help for your mom, the Family Caregiver Alliance offers a helpful guide that you can access at Caregiver.org/resource/hiring-home-help.

lake whitefish struggle across much of the Great Lakes is a major focus of fisheries research by the state and tribes.

"You have to remember, 99.9 percent of all fish eggs laid, die," said Mark Ebener, a fishery biologist who worked 37 years for two intertribal Great Lakes organizations. He is the lead author of a 2021 review addressing declining recruitment in lake whitefish published by the Great Lakes Fishery Commission.

Most of the evidence for poor lake whitefish recruitment points to one culprit: invasive mussels. The premise is that quagga mussels have fundamentally changed how energy flows through the system, dramatically reducing zooplankton in nearshore waters, Ebener said.

Zooplankton are the primary food source for baby lake whitefish. The timing of the mussels' arrival and the drop in lake whitefish recruitment is likely more than mere coincidence. "Yeah, certainly, we think that's one of the primary causes of the decline in whitefish recruitment – the lack of zooplankton," Ebener said.

With so many people fond of a fish struggling so mightily to hold its own, a key question for negotiators is how many can be harvested each year if fewer are reaching adulthood?

It takes more time now for lake whitefish to become large enough to be caught commercially and old enough to reproduce the next generation. "It used to just be two to three years and they'd be in the fishery, probably reproducing," Pothoven said.

Because of the mussel's impact on the base of the food web, it now takes at least five years, and perhaps up to seven or more, he said. "They don't grow like they used to."

Pothoven and a team are trying to understand the early life history of lake whitefish.

The team is led by Kevin Donner, the Great Lakes Fisheries program manager of the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians in Harbor Springs, Mich.

"For us, when we started this in 2013, whitefish were already in decline, but we didn't know how much," Donner said.

A major concern is that by the time they collect information on fish big enough to be commercially caught, six or seven years may have passed without anyone knowing there might be problems that began while the fish were babies. Nobody was looking.

"So, if something bad happens, for example today, let's say no whitefish are born for whatever reason, we are going to continue along on our merry little way for seven years before anyone has enough data to say, 'Oh God, something's wrong," Donner said.

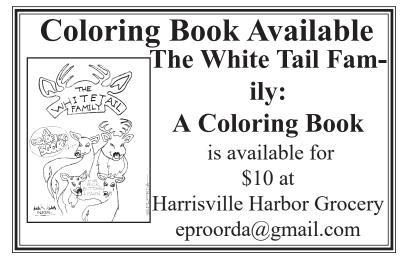

Since 2013, the survey team has sampled beaches in the spring, mostly in the northern Lower Peninsula. Lake whitefish spawn in autumn, favoring protective rocky nearshore areas. When eggs hatch in the spring, the larval whitefish survive off a yolk sac, a pouch coming off their bellies filled with fats and other goodies, until they've grown enough to hunt on their own.

When this happens, they venture into open waters, many choosing the seemingly barren environment found on sandy beaches favored by people. "Most people wouldn't even know that larval whitefish exist right around their ankles just before they're comfortable swimming in the lake," Donner said.

There are places in the Great Lakes where baby lake whitefish do much better. "Lower Green Bay is still good, Saginaw Bay is good, the north channel of Lake Huron is good, Lake Superior is still good. The problems are in the open waters of the main basin in Lake Michigan, Lake Huron and Lake Ontario," Ebener said.

In areas where lake whitefish do best, mussels don't have the stranglehold they do in the open waters of lakes Michigan and Huron.

If 99.995 percent of fish eggs don't survive, even a miniscule bump in baby fish surviving can be very important to the species, he said. "It's a numbers game."

The annual 4-H State Despite a smaller event this year, the youth competing came ready to play.

According to 4-H Les Thomas, Michigan State University Extension 4-H Program Coordinator, this youth tournament has been happening for over 30 years. The event typically attracts 500 plus youth from around Michigan to compete in one of eight areas, including four disciplines offered in Alcona 4-H: Target archery, 3D archery, skeet and trap.

Though Alcona youth have had access to a very successful archery program for almost 15 years, shotgun disciplines were only added in January of 2019, Thomas explained.

Four Alcona youth participated this year and represented the county well, both in competition and sportsmanship. All competed in the senior skeet class and nearly took home top honors with both individual scores and team. Team members were ing to watch how our kids have grown and accomplished goals that they didn't know they could."

Hubbard said the Hot Shots are excited to get back on the skeet field and build on their success with many younger members coming up this summer.

With school starting in roughly a month, practices will soon be moving to the weekends and the club will be looking for new members. All equipment is provided,

Surfmen's lives

By Eric Paul Roorda Artist & Author

The image of the lighthouse is that of a lonely outpost with a single, slightly addled keeper maintaining the beam. But a station of the United States Lighthouse and Life-Saving Service (USLLS) was like a tiny town. Our own Sturgeon Point USLLS station was a little seasonal community with its own whistle stop on the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad Line.

The staff of the station numbered from 10 to 12 "surfmen" and officers, both bachelors and married men, some with families. The single surfmen lived dormitory-style on the second floor of the big Victorian surfboat house, with its ornate gables. Those with families lived in a cluster of cottages nearby. The captain of this crew was the lighthouse keeper, who resided in comparative luxury in the two-story, eight-room residence at the base of the tower.

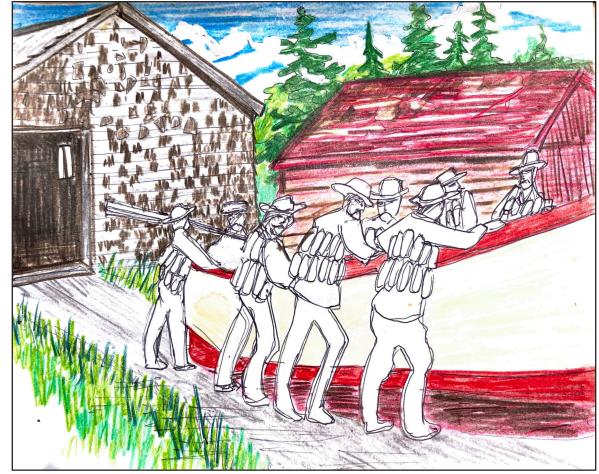

life preservers made from cork, to be prepared to launch the surfboat in the worst conditions Lake Huron can serve up, which were the likeliest to wreck a ship.

The crew comprised seven surfmen at the oars and an officer to steer. They became adept at maneuvering the surfboat, which measured (on average) 26 feet in length, and a 6 foot 9.5 inch beam, so big it required a railroad track from the boathouse to the lake-shore to launch it. They could make it spin around, make it go so fast it left a tion, approaching in September, would be the perfect time to dedicate one! But I digress...

I stand a weekly watch in the Sturgeon Point Lighthouse tower, like my father did for 20 years, before he passed the line for me to tow. Every week there is something to learn from the visitors, some with family connections to the spot. Recently, a grandmother climbed the 86 steps with her two grandsons, children whose great-grandfather was born at the station, the child of a surfman named Barrows.

Surfmen launch the surfboat from an early version of the boathouse before the fancy two-story Victorian structure replaced it.

The lighthouse keeper/ captain ran the place as if it were a ship at sea. He had three officers, akin to the first, second and third mates on a vessel, to assist him in managing the station's operations. The surfmen stood watch, ringing a bell every half hour to keep time just like on a ship, measuring it in fourhour shifts, with a single toll of the bell marking 30 minutes, and eight rings meaning quitting time. The bell was mounted on a watchtower about 25 feet tall, as opposed to the 70-foot lighthouse tower, where the men took turns standing lookout. The officer of the watch kept a log that noted weather conditions and passing ships. Most of the men who lived and worked at Sturgeon Point Life-Saving Station were "surfmen," whose main role was to row the large "surfboat," which was the key to saving lives in case of a shipwreck on treacherous Sturgeon Point Reef. They practiced in all kinds of weather, wearing white wake behind it, and stop it on a dime.

On special occasions like the Fourth of July, when the people of Harrisville and the surrounding farms came to Sturgeon Point for a day of picnics and games, a surfboat exhibition, where the surfmen showed off their skills, was always on the program of events. So was baseball-the crew at the station was numerous enough to field a team. In fact, the most famous person born at Sturgeon Point went on to be a Major League Hall of Famer. Hazen Shirley "Ki Ki" Cuyler's father was a surfman there. His parents, both from Canada, wed in Black River, built a cottage in Alcona, then moved it to Sturgeon Point. When a knee injury ended Mr. Cuyler's career with the USLLS, he moved the house into Harrisville, where it stands today, on US-23 just north of town. Why is there no historical marker there? The big Ki Ki Cuyler celebraThey were properly proud of their ancestor's service.

standing that the reference books inform us that "The first electrical telephone was publicly described by its German inventor Reis in 1861, but the first capable of practical use was patented by Bell in 1876, the fact remains that the first long distance telephoning in Alcona county, and possibly in the state, was done in 1873 or '74, at least two years before the time set in Webster's New Internaauoted. The story of this early phone was given to the Review by Mr. Frank E. Beard of Port Huron, who was here last week for the home coming. Mr. Beard first came to Alcona in 1869 and in the 70's was manager there of the extensive lumbering operations of the Beard Company of which his father was senior member. He was also telegraph operator for the Western Union, which put its lines thru to Alpena about the year 1870. To get operators for this at that time new business, the telegraph company sent an expert to the several offices to break in the new men. Mr. Beard at Alcona, L. A. Colwell at Harrisville and another young man at Devil River (Ossineke) were among the first along the shore to receive this training, the company's man stay-

August 3, 1922 ~ Notwith- ing about thirty days with each one. Lou Howard was the operator at Alpena.

It was quite the thing in those days for checker players in the different towns along the shore to play the game by telegraph during the evenings when the wires were not busy, and young Beard was in on the game with a good backer, a school teacher named Gray, to coach him. Telegraphing made slow work of the game and one evening Beard conceived the idea of connecting his Bell phone to the telegraph wires. He got Howard at Alpena to do likewise and was rewarded for its efforts by getting good talking results from Alcona to Alpena and thereafter the checker games were conducted by telephone instead of telegraph. To further test out the apparatus. Beard had Howard connect him up with the local phone to the Geo. L. Maltz home in Alpena and when he got them on the wire he was invited to come up to the house. He had hard work to convince Mrs. Maltz that he was talking to her from Alcona 30 miles away. Mr. Beard thinks this may have been the first long distance phone in the state, if not in the United States, and from all the facts that are at hand, his belief is wellfounded.

Simmons always there to lend a hand

Ristow and Kay Kniep

There are some constants in Alcona County. There is always something that needs doing.

And fortunately, there is always someone willing to step in and do it.

Almost as constant is the appearance of Gayle Simmons, early each morning, headed down M-72 in her green pickup truck. As the morning hours wind toward noon, you are assured of hearing her laughter echoing down the courthouse hallways. The absence of such jovial sounds would certainly catch the attention of other county workers in their offices, causing them to wonder what could be wrong.

Gayle has been a constant in the courthouse and county for many years. After serving as deputy county clerk for several years, she was elected county clerk five years ago. Last summer, she was reelected for her second term.

For many, the idea of processing the county's thousands of documents sounds rather mundane. Not for involved in the Alcona Ath-Gayle, who handles a myriad letic Association in a number of assignments and respon- of capacities.

August 6 1997 ~ By John sibilities, and still manages to laugh.

From birth to death certificates, it would seem nearly every document of life in Alcona County passes through Gayle's hands at one time or another. If you wish to marry, you will need to pay (literally) a visit to the county clerk's office.

If it doesn't actually last until death do you part, you will probably get to revisit Gayle - or at least your lawyer will. If it results in death, you, too, will get to meet Gayle - in court. She'll even schedule your trial for you.

Of course, many have had the opportunity to meet Gayle in more pleasant places. Her laughter has been heard throughout the county. Many times, it has been in and around Alcona Community Schools.

She and husband, Richard, have raised three children. As they have passed through the school system, Gayle has always been there when something needed to be done.

Gayle has been actively

Many a grateful athlete, however, remembers her best for the full stomach she and other members of the association have provided. As the mother of two teenage boys, she knew the power of hunger.

Even though it often meant waiting until after eleven o'clock at night, Gayle was at the school with her famous sloppy joes ready to go for home and visiting athletes.

Even with all the food Gayle has prepared for After Proms, football concession stands and basketball tournaments, even with the countless other things she has done for our community, it is her smile and bubbling laughter that is most indicative of her true spirit. She greets each new chore with a happy face.

Counties such as Alcona will always have needs to be met.

As life continues to begin and end, there will always be a need to record and document life's happenings. We are fortunate to have community members such as Gayle consistently there fill that - and so many other needs.

Petition circulated for Cuyler as Tiger manager

August 5, 1948 ~ A drive to have Hazen (Ki Ki) Cuyler considered as manager of the Detroit Tigers in 1949 is under way in Michigan, through circulating petitions seeking 100,000 signatures.

George Killmaster of Chesaning, who is athletic director at Chesaning Union High School, is back of this movement and is circulating the petitions.

Cuyler is now managing the Atlanta, Georgia Crackers in the Southern League and is serving his last season of a three-year contract. He served in big league baseball from 1924 to 1937 with the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Chicago Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds. His success in the baseball field is nationally known.

Killmaster is contacting Michigan Newspapers to boost the drive for petition signers. He states that Chesaning. Flint and Saginaw are 100% behind the movement, and urges that Ki's home county back him up equally as well.

The petitions have been distributed in the county, and more are available at the Review Office if desired.
